MOUNT PLEASANT.

The weather is very warm and dry at present. A good heavy rain would be very acceptable.

The farmers around our little hamlet are busy as usual. Some are drawing milk and railroading, others are improving their premises with new fences and the ladies are picking strawberries.

Mr. Joe Driver is putting a new roof on his barn.

The Ladies Aid Society has had the old platform removed from the front of the chutch and a new cement one built with a wall of cement block. Mr. Ross Oliver is suffering with an attack of tonsillitis.

Mrs. Gould, sr., is gradually sinking. The old lady is over ninety years of age and has been confined to her room for months, which means a great care to her devoted son and family.

Mr. J. Turnbull and Mr. and Mrs. H. Henderson spent Tuesday in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hudson and son, Walter, spent Wednesday in Kingston and took in the Barnum & Bailey circus.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Oliver spent Tuesday at O. S. Davis'.

Miss Nellie Davis has been absent for a month visiting friends in Blessington.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Abrams, of Sydenham, are renewing old acquaintances and visiting their daughter, Mrs. A. G. Oliver.

ANNUAL SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The annual Sunday School Convention for Richmond Township, was held in the Methodist Church, Selby, on Friday, June 20th, Rev. L. Sharp very ably filling the chair.

The afternoon session opened with a very excellent paper given by Miss M. Mellow, outlining the Primary work of the Sunday School, showing that in the Primary classes the foundation for all future Sabbath School work is started, also how necessary it is for each child to be given some work to do. She showed how easily this might be done by using the Graded lessons, by working the Cradel Roll and etc., this paper was well discussed and we feel sure will prove helpful to many.

The Subject of the Sunday School and Missions was then taken up by Mrs. M. S. Madole. She made it very clear that Missions was the Mission of the Sunday School. It was the Mission of the Sunday School to give the Wonderful Gospel Story not only to those at home but in every land.

In the discussion that followed this most excellent address it was strongly advised that every Sunday School set the first Sunday in the month as Missionary Sunday and the offering on that Day be kept for Missions. In this way the matter of Missions be brought before the minds of the children that they may become educated in Mission work.

This was followed by two very impressive addresses by Mr. E. J. Sex-smith and Rev. J. S. McMullen in which the Ideal Superintendent, Ideal teacher and Ideal Sunday School was brought very forcibly before the Convention, dwelling particularly upon the high moral standing necessary and the great necessity of filling such offices with men and women of high Christian standing. After a lively discussion of the subjects the afternoon session closed.

Tea was then served in the basement of the church for all delegates and friends' after which the nominating Committee meet and elected the officers for the coming year.

This Committee recommends that the invitation extended by the people of Empey Hill, to meet there in Town-ship Convention on or about June 20 th, 1914, be accepted, also that Napa-nee Sunday Schools be invited to associate with Richmond in Township Convention.

Moved that the Sunday School officers and circuit Superintendents form the Township executive.

The evening session opened with Singing and a few very helpful re-marks from the Chairman, Rev. L. Sharp, along the line of how import-ant it was to find our place and then to fill it. Rev. J. W. Down gave us facts and figures comparing the work of the present with that of two years ago and very clearly showed us there was much to encourage along every line. Advancement being made in Adult Primary and Cradel Roll work, as well as Missionary work.

Rev. J. S. McMullen and Rev. S. Sellery, gave the crowning addresses of the convention and we are sure that all attending the convention left with the feeling that it had been time very profitably spent, there would be so much to think over, to act upon and to help the Sunday School work to mean more to the people of Richmond than ever before.

COMPARISONS MADE

C.P.R. Earns More in West and Less in East Than U. S. Lines.

American Interstate Commerce Commission's Expert Gives Evidence Before Railway Board, In Which He Compares C.P.R. Earnings With the Average of 25 U. S. Railways—Dispute Over Classification.

OTTAWA, June 24.—Although the C.P.R. charges high rates in the west, claiming that its cost of operation there justifies them, it earns about 14 per cent. more gross operating profits west of Fort William than the average of twenty-five American railroads similarly placed. Although, on the other hand, its rates here in the east are low, alleged to be a result of operating costs being lower, it received about 14 per cent. less gross operating profits than the average of twenty-five American roads in the eastern states.

This was the gist of the evidence presented before the Railway Commission yesterday by P. P. Muller, a U. S. expert and a former employee of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who has been retained by Government counsel.

Nearly the whole afternoon session was taken up by a justification and explanation by Mr. Muller of his system of dividing expenses between freight and passenger operation. This is practically the philosopher's stone of the rate enquiry and the skeleton key to the whole question of determining what should be a reasonable freight rate. Without knowledge of what freight service costs it is almost impossible to arrive at what should be its remuneration.

Mr. Muller stated he was a member of the firm of Warwick, Mitchell, Peal & Co., chartered accountants, and for five years had been an employee of the U. S. Interstate Commerce Commission.

It was necessary in the present case to obtain a division of operating revenue east and west of the C.P.R. The 1911 total, amounting to $97,000,000, was divided between eight divisions, as was the operating expenses. The first primary analysis after this method had shown 73.60 per cent. total operating ratio in the east, and only 60.04 in the west.

In the figures submitted to the railway, revenue was divided between passenger and freight, but this had not been done in the case of the expense, so he had to do it himself. He believed as a result that the cost of passenger operation was much greater than of freight. For every dollar of revenue, 75 cents was spent on passenger traffic and 66-2-3 cents on freight.

A discussion then followed between the witness and the chairman as to the best system of arriving at what constituted a fair rate. The ideal system was to base returns on the original investment, but it had not been found practicable in the U. S. "We couldn't get it here either, I am afraid," said the chairman.

The cost of accounting systems to railroads was then brought up. Mr. Muller stating it had constituted 60 per cent. of the expense on one small road to comply with the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission in this regard.

A technical discussion of Mr. Muller's cost accounting system followed.

WRECK NEAR MATTAWA

Two Young Women Are Not Expected to Recover.

Three Daughters of Henry Morell, M.P.P. for Nipissing, Are Hurt and It is Believed That Two of Them Will Die—The Train Was Derailed While Running Along the Bank of the Ottawa Riv-r.

NORTH BAY, Ont., June 24.—Two were fatally injured and four were hurt in a wreck last night on the Kippewa branch of the C.P.R. running from Timiskaming to Mattawa. The two who, it is thought, will succumb to their injuries are the two older daughters of Henry Morell, M.P.P. for Nipissing. The others reported to be injured are the younger Miss Morell, Miss Lillian Payette of North Bay, Alois Hennessy, shoe traveler, and Chief of Police Milroy of Mattawa. The injured were all taken to the hospital at Mattawa, and are being cared for there.

The wreck happened nineteen miles north of Mattawa, and was caused by a derailment. The railway runs through a wild, rocky country along the bank of the Ottawa River. The right of way in many places is cut out of the side of the mountain, with the river tumbling far below. It is used largely by tourists and lumbermen.

The Misses Morell were returning from the convent at Villemarie to attend their father's wedding, set for Monday next. The elder girl is 18 years of age. Miss Payette was also on her way home from the convent to visit her parents.

HIS DEATH A MYSTERY.

Investigation Into Demise of "Drunk" Yields Nothing.

TORONTO, June 24.—From the inspector, sergeants and other police officers in No. 6 Division, Coroner J. W. Russell's jury were last night unable to learn how Charles Marshall's skull became fractured, and an open verdict was returned.

Marshall, who at one time was a clerk in the drug department at Eaton's, and was a Mason of high degree, died in the General Hospital on June 15, after being in the jail for a week, to where he was remanded from the police court as a "drunk."

All the police officials, including the constable who made the arrest, stated they had seen no marks on his head. On the other hand every official who saw the prisoner at the jail had noticed a black and blue mark behind the left ear. The post-mortem examination revealed that the skull was fractured immediately below this discoloration, and that three hemorrhages and softening of the brain resultant upon this injury had caused death.

In the course of the investigation T. H. Wilson, jail bookkeeper, stated that Constable Chapman, the driver of the patrol wagon which transported Marshall to the jail, had stated he had seen the injury behind the man's ear as he was entering the jail. A jurymen suggested that Chapman should be summoned, but Inspector Verney rose from his seat and advised that Chapman could not throw any new light upon the case, as he had not been inside the van and would not know if anything happened inside on the journey from the City Hall to the jail.

A CITY OF CHANGE.
Ephesus, Once on the Seacoast, Is Now Located Far Inland.

Sir William Ramsay characterizes Ephesus as the "City of Change." And truly it has seen marvelous changes and its inhabitants many removals. In the days of St. Paul and St. John Ephesus was a city of the seacoast; the waters of the Aegean lapped its busy wharves. Now the traveler to Ephesus can scarcely imagine that he is near the sea. To all appearances he is as far away as on one of our inland prairie.

LT, June 24.—One of the big-grade seizures made in the some time has been made in by Inspector A. T. Rowell and a Constable Jerry Lefebvre, five persons are locked up in provincial jail, including three from the seizures of tools. Police are certain they have the place from which silver crucifixes, etc., have been turned for some time past. by five persons are locked up in a provincial jail, including three men. From the seizures of tools, the police are certain they have the place from which silver crucifixes, etc., have been factured for some time past.

Polish miners, working in Co. were taken into custody on Saturday by the provincial police, and at the time of the arrest, about ten pounds of silver was seized including a silver necklace, maltese crosses, Swastikas, luck charms, etc. With the seizure on Saturday were found various moulds and partly completed, and several pounds of dust from the filings were taken by the police, who believe in this raid they have put a stop to the manufacture of solid silverware, which has been going on lately in camp for some time.

The arrival of the police caused a commotion among the three women in the house. Mary Partnoik, a girl of 17, ran out of the house and hid in a room containing a couple of pounds of silver, while the other two showed great agitation. In the cellar of the house the police found fresh diggings and a few feet of the surface uncovered saws, files and other tools with which work had been done. A small amount of silver was also found in an attic at the rear. More silver was secreted in tins and altogether, have between 12 and 15 pounds.

Train Narrowly Escaped Being Wrecked In Tunnel.

LONDON, June 24.—What is suspected to have been a militant suffragette attempt to wreck an express train from London to Plymouth in a tunnel near Devonport on Saturday, ended to-day. A motor belonging to the London & Southwestern Railway, while proceeding through the tunnel along the rails, came in conflict with a heavy obstacle. The motor was made a search and discovered many sleepers wedged between the rails over which the express train was due to pass. The sleepers were removed just as the long train thundered through the tunnel.

Beatrice H. Saunders, the first secretary of the Women's Social Political Union, who, with her officials of the militant suffragette organization, was sentenced to months' imprisonment on June 23 for conspiring to commit malicious damage to property, was released on Saturday evening because of illness, owing to her refusal to take

"I couldn't get it here either, I am afraid," said the chairman.

The cost of accounting systems to railroads was then brought up. Mr. Muller stating it had constituted 60 per cent. of the expense on one small road to comply with the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission in this regard.

A technical discussion of Mr. Muller's cost accounting system followed, the witness admitting it was "not the kind of work to make a man's blood run freely."

The U. S. Commerce Commission divided railway operating expenses, for instance, into 116 different accounts. About the only essential points of difference between accounting formulae followed by U. S. railroads and Mr. Muller were as regards maintenance of ways and structural accounts.

In reply to a question by the chairman as to the fair rate of return for operating expenses, Mr. Muller stated that if it were dividends the chairman had in mind, he would not like to commit himself, as dividends depended, on the volume of capital stock, and there was so little connection between this and the actual assets behind.

"That is right," said Chairman Drayton, "they are sometimes in the ratio of five to one."

The witness then went over some figures which showed that whereas 25 American eastern lines had earned more gross operating expenses than the C.P.R. on its eastern divisions (42.45 per cent., as compared with 28.21 per cent. in 1912, respectively), 25 American roads in the west had earned in 1912, 49.86, as compared with 64.17 per cent. received by the C.P.R. in the west.

A discussion followed as to whether the volume of business from 25 roads should be taken as a basis of comparison, the chairman holding it would be better to make a specific case, based on the operations of one road.

The hearing resumes to-day.

TERRA NOVA UNLOADING.

Scott's Fossils Will Be Put on View In London.

LONDON, June 24.—The Terra Nova, now lying in Cardiff, has been divested of much of her contents. The natural history collections, which are very extensive and fill nearly 200 cases, have been transferred to the Natural History Museum at South Kensington, but have not yet been unpacked. Of the collections of high scientific interest, perhaps the most important, and from a personal point of view certainly the most precious, is the collection of fossils discovered by Capt. Scott and Wilson during the ill-fated return journey from the South Pole. This box of fossils was found on a sledge when the relief party arrived at the place where Capt. Scott and his brave companions perished. The whereabouts of the sledge was indicated by a pole which Scott had erected, knowing the sledge would be hidden by the snow.

Educated at Selby, York, and St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, he became president of the Royal College of Surgeons in 1889-90. He was Hunterian professor at the Royal College of Surgeons, a member of the Royal Commission on Smallpox Hospitals in 1884, and on Vaccination in 1890-96.

He was created a Knight in 1908, and had the degrees of F.R.C.S., M.D., LL.D., and F.R.S. Not only did he occupy a prominent position as a consulting surgeon, but he was the author of a number of important publications.

LURED GIRLS AWAY.

Mohawk Institute Pupils at Brantford Caught In Time.

BRANTFORD, June 23.—Authorities at the Mohawk Institute had a stern chase for two Indian girls, aged 14 and 15 years, whom, it is alleged, an effort was made to entice away from the institute. The girls were found in a house opposite the institute, and they jumped from the windows in an effort to escape. When caught tickets for Hamilton were found in their possession.

Owing to the character of the house in which the girls were found, the attempted abduction of the girls looked like a case of white slave operations to the principal of the institute, and action will be taken against the woman of the house. She left for Hamilton immediately after the capture of the girls.

Highbinder Ring In 'Frisco Broken by Arrest of Leader.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—Black-mail, murders, opium smuggling and smuggling of coolies across the border were revealed in letters and documents taken Sunday upon the arrest of Wong Do King, head of the Bing Kung Tong, according to information given out yesterday by Federal immigration officials.

Death, the immigration men say, was the penalty for all who opposed or attempted to betray the schemes of the highbinders. The deportation of Wong will be sought at once, and other Chinese powerful in many American cities will be prosecuted. Wong for twenty years has been head of the Bing Kungs, the most warlike and powerful of the Chinese Tongs.

One of the letters was a catechism for smuggled Chinese, preparing them for questions by immigration inspectors if apprehended.

Even in St. John's time the port was kept open only by strenuous effort and constant dredging.

These changes wrought by nature have compelled frequent changes on the part of the inhabitants. The original city was built not far from Ayasolouk and "the whole Ephesian valley was an arm of the sea dotted with rocky islands and bordered by picturesque mountains and wooded promontories," we are told. As the sea receded in the course of the centuries the population moved with it until the Roman city, the city of St. Paul and St. John, was some miles from the original site. At last this port became impossible and the inhabitants moved farther back, nearer to the site of the more ancient city, where today the few inhabitants that still remain are found.—Christian Herald.

MR. BORDEN'S DECEPTION

Attempts to Make Canada Believe that Britain's Naval Programme Was Changed by Defeat of the Naval Bill.

Considerable efforts have been made by the Conservative Jingo Press at the instigation of Mr. Borden, to make capital out of the announcement of Mr. Winston Churchill on June 6, that the British Admiralty intended to advance the construction of three battleships on this year's programme, starting them as soon as possible, as a result of "The situation created by the rejection of the Canadian Naval Bill."

This is an absolute falsification of the facts. There is nothing in the whole course of the British Naval debates to indicate that the British programme could be affected in any degree by the "additional" Naval policies of any of the Dominions. This was time and again asserted by Mr. Churchill, the first Lord of the Admiralty. More than that, Mr. Churchill declares categorically that work on the three ships provided for had not been already started, that construction had been delayed because the shipyards were so overflowing with work it would be useless to give the orders until they were able to handle them. He asserted emphatically that these three ships would be begun when it was necessary to begin them, and that their construction was not a matter of necessity, but convenience.

Evidently the time when the capacity of the naval yards to build these battle ships had arrived, and Mr. Churchill considered it convenient to build them.

The opportunity however was too good a one for Mr. Borden to resist. He therefore deliberately tried to deceive the people of Canada by twisting Mr. Churchill's announcement, and attempting to make it appear that since he could not force his $35,000,000 contribution upon the Canadian people without their consent, that Great Britain, in a panic, was hurrying the building of these ships at once.

Mr. Borden declared it appeared "That the British Government have undertaken the duty which he thought should be undertaken by Canada at this juncture under the provisions of the Naval Aid Act" and again "The construction of these ships is a matter of convenience."

which they were given and accepted."

Therefore, with regard to the proposed Canadian Battleships, Mr. Churchill said "It is not proposed to merge them in the regular squadron of the British fleet," and then he outlined the proposed formation of an "Imperial squadron" under the direct control of the Admiralty, to comprise the Canadian, New Zealand and Malay ships, to be based upon Gibraltar, to sail over the five seas and "show the flag."

MERE MATTER OF CONVENIENCE

Even more explicit was Mr. Churchill on March 31st, when in answer to a question as to naval construction he said:

"Why then, it will be said by the Hon. member for Kensington, do you not begin three contract ships of this year at an earlier date?"

"The answer is simple and complete. They will be begun when it is necessary to begin them. That depends to some extent on the date on which ships are begun elsewhere. It also depends to some extent on the best moment to make contracts. We are dealing, not with a matter of necessity, but of convenience."

Further Mr. Churchill said, "I am not of course, counting the three Canadian ships, because they are still under discussion." On Monday, December 9th, 1912, Lord Charles Berestford asked Mr. Churchill for assurance whether the gift of three heavy armoured ships to the British Government by Canada would be regarded over and above the number the admiralty considered necessary to construct for European waters.

Mr. Churchill replied, "In introducing the supplementary estimates on July 22nd last, I said that it was the wish of the Canadian Government that the aid of Canada should be in addition to the existing British programme, and that any step which Canada might take should directly strengthen the naval forces of the empire, and add to the margin available for its security. To this I have nothing to add."

In view of these statements, it is perfectly plain that Mr. Churchill cannot really be influenced by the position of the Naval problem in Canada. In his own words: "We are dealing not with a matter of necessity, but of convenience."

CANADA'S REAL HUMILIATION.

On the day Parliament prorogued Premier Borden made a last effort to hide his own mistakes with regard to the Naval Aid Bill, by saying that the action of the Senate in refusing to pass the Bill until the people had passed judgment upon it "is intensely humiliating to the people of Canada."

It was not the Senate that humiliated Canada, it was Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden, Premier of Canada.

It was Mr. Borden who declared if Parliament did not quickly give him his emergency grant he would appeal to the people—and repudiated his solemn obligation when faced with the issue.

It was Mr. Borden who formed the Nationalist alliance which was at the back of his anti-Imperial conduct.

It was Mr. Borden who preferred power and the sweets of office to patriotism or even truthfulness.

It was Mr. Borden who, when Parliament refused the contribution hid behind the cheap pretext that the Senate did not represent the people, and so refused to keep his word.

It was Mr. Borden who tried to coerce Parliament by the aid of his forsworn Nationalist allies; who preferred the dishonor of being false to the pledges upon which the people elected him to facing the people.

It was Mr. Borden who finally tried to make the people of Canada believe that because the British Admiralty is continuing a long prepared naval program they are doing so because the Senate defeated his naval Bill—knowing full well the British government is doing nothing of the kind and that he himself, not the Senate, defeated it, rather than appeal to the people.

THAT IS CANADA'S REAL HUMILIATION.

He Is a Wise Old Man and a Wealthy One Now.

Skookum Jim is a wise old red man. For more years than he can number he has lived on the Kisilano Reserve, on the busy Vancouver waterfront. The passing years have transformed the scene he knew as a youth and as a man grown. They have mowed the forest from the hillside and planted in its stead tall smokestacks and piles of apartment blocks. They have brought lines of glistening steel and snarling, busy sawmills to his clam-sown beach. They have driven fussy tugs with endless, endless rafts of logs over the banks where the whiting used to team. They have flung steel viaducts across his familiar creek. They have driven the head of Skookum Jim deep down between his shoulders, and have added phalanx on phalanx of wrinkles to his brow. And through it all Jim has waited, and been the gainer for his waiting. Wrinkles the years hold in store for all, wealth they bring to many, but wisdom is their gift to few. All three they brought to Skookum Jim.

Wisdom came to Jim a bit at a time. He has been accumulating it through many, many months. The wealth, however, came suddenly. Lo, the poor Indian is poor no longer. One day recently, for the first time in eight years, Jim went across to the city. He came of the reserve

THE CURSE OF MAR

Every Part of it Was Fulfilled Course of 800 Years.

Curses do sometimes come to roost. One of the best known curse of Mar." The Earl of Mar cursed prior to 1571, when he was vated to the position of regent Scotland. This was the curse:

"Thy lands shall be given to a stranger, and thy titles shall lie in the dead. The branch that is from thee shall see his dwelling in which a king was nursed—bliss a sacrifice to that same fame, but numerous, but of little bon three born and grown who shall see the light. Horses shall be in thy hall, and a weaver shall his shuttle in the chamber of Thine ancient tower shall be and a beacon until an ash sapling spring from its topmost stone. shall thine honors be restored kiss of peace shall be given countless, though she seek it on the days of peace shall return fine."

In the course of 300 years every of the curse was fulfilled. T 1820 the ash sapling duly appeared. Two years later George IV, r

Canadian people without their consent, that Great Britain, in a panic, was hurrying the building of these ships at once.

Mr. Borden declared it appeared "The British Government have undertaken the duty which he thought should be undertaken by Canada at this juncture under the provisions of the Naval Aid Act" and again "The construction of these ships is apparently to be proceeded with by the British Government," and then in vague terms Mr. Borden intimated that in these circumstances later on the government might take steps for the acquisition of these ships.

During the whole of this oration Mr. Borden knew that the building of these three ships was part of a long considered comprehensive programme laid down by the British Admiralty, and had nothing whatever to do with the three ships Canada would have presented had his emergency grant gone through. These three ships were to be in addition to the three Mr. Churchill is now building, and were to go into an Imperial Squadron to be stationed at Gibraltar and not in the North Sea.

Mr. Borden knew that if he wished to do anything to bring Canada into line to take her share in Imperial defence he, even at that late hour, could have done it with the most active co-operation of the Opposition under the Naval Act of 1910, based upon the unanimous decision of Parliament in 1909. He refused to do anything. He tried to blame the Liberal party for his obstinate refusal. He tried to excuse himself before the people by deliberately falsifying the effect of Great Britain's Naval policy.

That this is the case, is amply proved by a few quotations from Mr. Winston Churchill's announcement in the Imperial parliament.

WHAT NEW SHIPS MEAN.

On March 13th, last, Mr. Churchill presented his Naval estimates providing for five new capital battle ships. He explained that the programme had been reduced to this figure, owing to "the extraordinary pressure of work in the shipyards, and the scarcity of labour, leading to short earnings of contractors on the continuous programme."

Again discussing these works, on March 27th, last, Mr. Churchill enlarged upon this theme, and said, "The Estimates of this year would indeed have been considerably higher, but for the condition in the shipyards, arising from the extraordinary demand upon our ship building plants, and especially upon the skilled labor supply which are characteristic of the present moment. It is no use my asking parliament for larger sums of money, which will not, as far as can now be foreseen, be earned by the contractors. If better progress is made in executing the programme which Parliament has sanctioned, there is no question of new charges, it is a question of executing decisions which the House have already come to."

Later on in the same speech, Mr. Churchill said regarding the proposed Canadian ships and the Malay warships, that they "Will also be additional to the total I have mentioned that being the specific condition on of convenience."

DOWNING STREET INTERFERENCE.

BRITISH "NATION," SAYS CHURCHILL AIMS TO CONTROL COLONIAL POLITICS.

"The Nation," a leading British journal, is amazed that the Mr. Borden who in 1909 declared that "the proper line to pursue is the line of having a Canadian force of our own" should be the same Mr. Borden, who in 1912, urged the policy of centralization and tribute to be the best for Canada.

Then the Nation gives the answer:—"Churchill and his non-existent emergency, under which Canada has been offered a share in an Imperial squadron, which is no more imperial than the rest of the fleet, and is a mere item in the anti-German sum which our admiralty are always adding up and bringing to a different total. Downing Street interference becomes once more a cry in Colonial politics to a generation which had almost forgotten its meaning. The Admiralty should never have asked and pleaded and diplomatized for these ships, and still less should it have tried to impound them for this obsolete German quarrel. The government should revert to the Liberal formula of running the empire by letting the empire run itself."

Along this same tradition of British Government, Canada must revert to the policy of running Canada by letting Canada run itself. It is time that Mr. Borden, with his ideas of having Canada run from Downing Street gave way to British constitutional ideas of the Government. When the people of Canada have the opportunity to speak, they will decide in favor of the man whom Winston Churchill designated as "that far sighted Imperial statesman, Sir Wilfred Laurier."

A Charade.

An emblem of stupidity,
My first in forests found;
Up in air oft rises high,
Though fastened to the ground,
But by sharp means it is removed
And managed various ways;
By art or skill may be improved,
Or perhaps it makes a blaze.
My second is of every kind,
Is good or bad or gay;
Is dull or bright, to suit all minds,
By night as well as day.
The patient seaman keeps with care my whole,
And well it knows his secrets night and day,
And, though it has no tongue nor hear nor soul,
It tells the story of the ship's long way.

Peas and spinach are much better color if cooked uncovered.
Soak wilted vegetables in cold water to freshen them.
Put salt in cooking vegetables when half done.
A dash of soda helps green vegetables to keep their color.
Cook delicately flavored vegetables in a small amount of water.
Cook vegetables which have a strong odor or taste in a large amount of water.
Cook your carrots and beets whole, then skin and slice.
When frying oysters try adding a little baking powder to the crumbs in which they are rolled.

The Tilted Parasol.

The tilted parasol for garden parties or for use at the seashore when no hat is worn ought to be popular, for it is surely convenient. The parasol tilts on the handle and can be held behind the head at any angle, so it at once forms a pretty background for the face and a real protection against the sun.

many, but wisdom is their gift to few. All three they brought to Skookum Jim.

Wisdom came to Jim a bit at a time. He has been accumulating it through many, many months. The wealth, however, came suddenly. Lo, the poor Indian is poor no longer. One day recently, for the first time in eight years, Jim went across to the city. His comrades of the reserve, some two dozen in number, went along, and they were led by "Hally" Alexander, whom all of them had known for years, into a downtown bank. There, in the vault, they were shown a pile of gold, as much as six men could carry. It would be theirs, they were told, the moment they quit the reserve for good. The pile of gold was worth well over a quarter of a million dollars—enough to pay $11,250 to the head of every family on the reserve. There was some demurring at first. The younger men thought the sum too small. The representative of an American railroad had offered them twice as much. Why should they take less than they could get? But the older men at length carried the day, and the agreement was signed. One day more on the old reserve and the Indians were to pack their belongings on a scow and be transferred, bag and baggage, up the coast to Squamish. Their seventy acres of reserve, with its half mile of waterfront, was to go to the Province of British Columbia.

It was all very curious and wonderful. Jim didn't pretend to understand it. Far, far away to the south, they had told him, men were digging a great ditch, as wide as the Fraser and twice as long as the Inlet. It would bring ships to Vancouver—more in a week than come now in many months. And back in the mountains other men were feverishly boring tunnels which would let a stream of grain down from the wheatfields to the ocean. The ships must be docked and loaded. The grain must be stored and cleaned. Skookum Jim's reserve was needed for docks and tracks and elevator sites. He, being only a red man, would have to move. His gold he could take or leave in the bank. Whatever he did with it, the white man expected to get it back soon. Then the white man would have both—the gold and the reserve. And Skookum Jim? Well, he was only Skookum Jim.

The day after the signing of the agreement with the Government a scow was beached close by the Kitsilano Reserve, and the Indians carried all their household goods and fishing gear down to it. When the tide came in the scow floated free. A tug hitched on and the Indians were off. The white man's march forward; the red man's retreat. A week later numbers of them were back in the city, and there were more drunken Indians in Vancouver than at any time in five years. But Skookum Jim was not among those who came to celebrate. The city has no charms for him. He is ending his days in peace and plenty on a little ranch which his business manager has provided at Squamish.

FOR BETTER EGGS.

Movement on Foot To Improve the Production and Quality.

For many years, eggs have been purchased by number without regard to quality. This is unfair to the farmer who markets good clean fresh eggs. To pay as much for good as for bad eggs is but one way of encouraging carelessness in the handling of this extremely perishable product. It is, in large measure the cause of the enormous loss which the Canadian egg trade now sustains—a loss or shrinkage varying between 15 to 20 per cent., which means that for every thirty dozen cases marketed, there is a loss equivalent to the value of about five dozen eggs.

This is a tremendous toll, and adds greatly to the cost of handling this product and has also the effect both of reducing the price to the farmer and increasing the price to the consumer. It therefore, is evident that the greatest boon to those concerned in the production, handling and consumption of eggs would be to eliminate this loss.

It has been long proven that the loss is entirely needless and could easily be overcome if the farmer and the handler would simply take better care of the product and get it to market more frequently. Heretofore, bad eggs have commanded the same price as good eggs. The question of quality has not been a consideration. It, therefore, is evident that so long as such an entirely antiquated and unbusiness-like system prevails there can be little or no hope for any improvement in the general quality of this product. Educational work alone would be entirely ineffective. To remedy this most unhealthy condition of the trade, it becomes imperative to hold out some financial inducement to the farmer and country dealer to place their eggs upon the market in as fresh a condition as possible. This can be done simply by paying more for good eggs than for inferior eggs and paying nothing for any which are absolutely bad and unfit for food.

Both the Ontario and Federal Governments have been for some time strongly endeavoring to induce the egg dealers to change their system of "case count" payment to that of "quality payment." Quality payment which involves the grading of eggs consists of paying for each separate grade according to its real value. At recent meetings, which were held to consider this question "quality payment" was not adopted but a step in the right direction was taken. The dealers committed themselves to buy eggs on a loss off basis which means that there will be no payment made for eggs which are bad and unfit for consumption.

This, indeed, will be welcome news to both the producer and consumer. By means of this measure production will be encouraged. The production and marketing of good eggs will be more profitable than formerly. It will also mean that following the elimination of unnecessary loss through bad eggs and other unnecessary charges against the cost of eggs, the consumer undoubtedly will get a cheaper article and one of better quality.

SCHOOL GARDENS.

Ontario Is Making Rapid Strides In This Direction.

The school garden movement is making encouraging progress in Ontario. During 1912, two hundred and fifty schools shared in the distribution of material, which consisted of collections of forest tree seedlings from the Norfolk forestry farm; packets of barley, alfalfa, lettuce, onion seed, flax, and other seeds for experimental plots, all of which was sent out free. Material for which a charge was made consisted of flower and vegetable seeds for the school garden or the child's home garden, tulip bulbs for fall planting, vines for decorating the school or covering out-buildings, shrubbery for planting on the school grounds. The schools sharing in the work are mostly in Western Ontario, but some schools in the newer parts of the province have joined in the work.

During 1913, seed will be supplied free on the understanding that it is to be used strictly for educational purposes. School progress clubs will be promoted and other plans developed for further extension of the school garden idea. And the spread of this system should result in making the rural school a place with beautiful surroundings, a cradle of scientific

IN THE PULLMAN.

The Experienced Traveler Can Avoid Many Discomforts.

Traveling in the sleeping car has many discomforts, but with experience and some forethought the getting dressed and undressed in a Pullman berth can be made less of an ordeal. In the first place, toilet articles should be so condensed or arranged that a heavy suit case or bag will not have to be kept in the berth. It is usually perfectly safe to leave a case—of course not containing valuables—just outside or under the berth.

If the upper berth is unoccupied the occupant of the lower berth usually is allowed to use it for her coat, hat, etc. But if she is limited to the space of her own section, she can still manage comfortably. With a hatpin she can fasten her tailor skirt and petticoat to the heavy curtain, and if a folding coat hanger has been a part of the traveling outfit the coat can also be hung on the curtain.

Soft lawn squares should also be carried and used to wrap up the dainty blouse corset and lingerie before laying them in the rack.

and a folding coat hanger has been a part of the traveling outfit the coat can also be hung on the curtain.

Soft lawn squares should also be carried and used to wrap up the dainty blouse corset and lingerie before laying them in the rack.

If the passengers aboard include many women, who will probably take their own deliberate time in the dressing room, and if the destination is to be reached rather early, it is possible to make a nearly complete toilet in the berth. A woman we know does not take down her hair at night, though she removes the large shell hairpins and then fastens her hair up securely with a firm net veil. She carries a small bottle of diluted alcohol with which she can thoroughly cleanse her face, and she then manages to slip into the dressing room when it is not crowded. And a word from the wise: If the stateroom is not occupied, for a little extra fee any agreeable porter will allow a passenger the use of it.

One traveler says that she feels far safer when sleeping in a light robe, for in case of accident a dark mass could not easily be discovered under the debris. Another idea, which originated with a traveler who is usually most optimistic is to have a shoe near the window, for in case of a wreck, or any sort of disaster, she says, the heel of the shoe can be used to break the window glass and make escape more possible.

An amusing little travel habit is to wrap one's watch in one's stocking, as this part of the wearing apparel cannot well be overlooked.

Petticoats on Seal Figure.

The Royal Society of Canada has a new role, that of a champion of virtue, as represented by discreet drapery in art.

At its general session recently the new seal of the society was on exhibition. Dr. W. H. Ellis, of Toronto, probably moved by the fact that the society had just voted to admit women to its membership, moved that "the designer of our new seal put petticoats on one of the figures therein."

Upon which the members of the society took the seal into serious consideration.

The sporting editors are also in trouble. The Royal Society passed a resolution to call the attention of the press and educational institutions to the widespread use of defective English, one member of the society stating that sporting pages of the present day were absolutely unintelligible to him. It was also lamented that the "the" sound is disappearing among the lower classes.

Pillar Stamp Vendors.

The new postal pillar boxes, which are likewise a stamp-vending machine, will soon be an established institution in Canada.

The company will start out at the first installation with 1,500 boxes. These will in all likelihood be established in the cities of Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa, where negotiations have gone on. They will replace the ordinary letter box in time, and ought to prove a big convenience.

The original inventor of the mechanism in the box, is supposed to have been a New Zealand postal clerk. It works in principle like gum slots, candy boxes and so forth. It has been on trial in England, France, and the United States.

Yukon's Fur Crop.

During the past ten years there have been exported from Southern Yukon an average of $50,000 worth of furs annually.

New Art President.

A Canadian painter, reported to have got $20,000 for a single canvas in New York, is the new president of the Canadian Art Club, whose sixth annual exhibition was held in Toronto recently. Horatio Walker looks considerably like the late J. Pierpont Morzan when a middle-aged man. Had he not gone into painting he might have been a financier. He was born in Canada, but has spent a great deal of his life abroad; a good deal of it in New York, where he has a shrewd dealer in the person of Mr. N. E. Montross.

But the most of Horatio Walker's work is done in his big, quiet studio on the Isle of Orleans, just below Quebec. He is the only painter in Canada who does most of his work on an island. He is recognized as the most powerful painter ever born in Canada; and if he would interpret Canadian life more, and the New York millionaires less, he might be regarded as essentially and altogether a Canadian painter. He has the gift of investing a homely subject such as pigs or milking time, or a horse-trough with a prodigious glamor of color which becomes eloquent though exceedingly good drawing.

Shipping Beavers.

The first shipment of live beavers from Toronto's beaver warehouse, the Riverdale Park Zoo, was made the other day, when six of Canada's national emblems were despatched to Dublin. They had been brought to Toronto several days ago from the Algonquin Park, and half a dozen were ordered for the Zoo in the Irish capital. Toronto gets two lions in exchange.

The attendants had a lively time catching the animals. They were in a tank, and when the keepers approached to grasp them, the beavers dived. Finally, by means of salmon landing nets, the six were caught. They were then placed in a heavy wooden box through a trap door in its top, moved on wheel-barrow to an express wagon, and driven to the Union Station. Before being put on board the train their temperature was taken, and all due medical precautions taken to insure their health on the journey.

He Was In the "Six-Cent" Book.

The inborn commercial spirit which is almost second nature with the average Hebrew was exemplified splendidly at the Forest School, Toronto, the other day.

The headmaster, Mr. Dent, was trying to sort the children into classes, and put to each one the query, "What book were you in."

The question was put to a diminutive Jewish boy, and he promptly replied "I'm in the book that costs six cents."

Investigation showed that the reader used in the second grade of the first book costs six cents and is marked with the price on the outside.

joined in the work.

During 1913, seed will be supplied free on the understanding that it is to be used strictly for educational purposes. School progress clubs will be promoted and other plans developed for further extension of the school garden idea. And the spread of this system should result in making the rural school a place with beautiful surroundings, a cradle of scientific agriculture, and a practical training ground for making raw schoolboys into skilled farmers.

A sample record of an experiment in the sowing of barley, made by a pupil in Waterloo County, shows the following net results: Four sowings were made, May 10th, 23rd, 31st, and June 12th; seeds germinated (in order) May 20th, 29th, June 6th, June 16th; estimated yield per acre (in order of sowing) 25 bushels, 20 bushels, 15 bushels, 10 bushels; quality of seed, good, fair, fair, small. Surely this will prove a practical demonstration, to this boy and his schoolmates, of the value of early sowing!

Of course, the success of this work depends upon intelligent directions, in the first instance, by the department, and in the detailed working out of instructions, by the teacher. To qualify the Public School teacher for efficient work in elementary agriculture special training of Normal graduates is given in connection with the Agricultural College; summer school sessions are also held and winter reading courses outlined. Special certificates in Elementary Agriculture and Horticulture are issued to teachers passing the requisite examinations.

One of the great obstacles to the successful teaching of agriculture in the rural school is the large number of classes and the wide curriculum to be handled, in so many schools, by a single teacher. The consolidation plan now so successfully operated in Manitoba, would give, in place of four or five of the present smaller schools, one large school located centrally, and with arrangements for the conveyance of children to the school. The facilities for conducting school gardens would be much better under this system.

Mont Royal a Volcano?

The St. Lawrence region is very frequently visited by very remarkable earth tremors, says a recent writer.

I lived in Montreal for five years and during that period I distinctly remember two rather heavy earthquakes which happened during the daytime. We had several in the night, but as I am rather a sound sleeper I did not feel these.

I was attending college in Montreal at the time and was sitting at a desk at approximately six o'clock in the evening when I experienced my first earthquake. The desk started to rock very violently, also the chair in which I was sitting. I do not know what else happened in that particular classroom, as the whole crowd got out in such a hurry we did not have a chance to wait and see. Across the street from the main entrance to the college a chimney fell from a private dwelling and narrowly missed hitting a baby in a baby carriage.

Two other earthquakes happened at about the same time, but I was used to it by this time, and it did not have the same effect. There is an old legend which is told in the region of Montreal to the effect that Mont Royal will some day open up as a full-fledged volcano. I understand that it is of volcanic origin, and if you will examine the top of the mountain very carefully you will see that it has an appearance somewhat similar to the crater of a small volcano, excepting that this mountain is covered with trees and grass.

Wedding at Bath.

At three o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives, a pretty wedding was solemnized in St. John's church, Bath, when Miss Etta Baunne, youngest daughter of Mrs. George Parks, Bath, was united in marriage to Frederick W. Whitcomb, of Kingston, by the rector, Rev. A. L. McTear. The bride entered the tastefully decorated church to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss McCaugherty, and took her place under an arch of flowers and ferns. She looked charming in a gown of white silk embroidered net over white silk, and wearing a most becoming hat, trimmed with roses and chiffon. She carried a shower bouquet of white carnations and maiden hair fern. She was attended by Miss Julia Barlow, of Kingston, who wore net over silk with delicate touches of pink and hat to match. L. McIntyre supported the groom. While signing the register the new bell pealed forth its happy chimes on the first occasion for a bridal party. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, when Mr. and Mrs. Whitcomb received many hearty congratulations. The house was prettily decorated with cut flowers and ribbon. At five o'clock a dainty luncheon was served with the bride's table centred by her wedding cake, surrounded by carnations and fern. The happy bride was the recipient of many costly and useful presents, showing how highly she was esteemed by her many friends. After a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Whitcomb will reside in Kingston.

What do you do with that vitally important thing—the prescription he leaves.

Do you use the same care in choosing the druggist to fill it that you do in choosing the doctor who writes it? And shouldn't you? Doesn't the success of the doctor's treatment depend more than upon anything else on the exactness and care, and the freshness, strength and purity of its ingredients.

We have no monopoly on honesty.—We don't claim to have. But we do claim to have one of the best and most completely equipped prescription departments in this or any other community.

OF GREAT INTEREST TO THE FARMER.

NOXIOUS WEEDS.

The Agricultural Office has had on exhibit at the Royal Hotel samples of some of the most troublesome weeds in bloom at this time. Farmers are invited to bring or send in for identification all weeds found by them that they do not know the name of. The weed will be identified and methods to get rid of the weed suggested. The weeds brought in during the last week are Blueweed or Bishop's Curse, Toad-flax, Brome Grass, Willow-Herk, Perennial Sow Thistle, Prickly lettuce, Wild Barley or Skunk Grass, and a number of samples of Yellow Goat's Beard. This latter weed is becoming common in all parts of the county, belongs to the Thistle Family, and spreads by blowing.

MUSTARD SPRAYING A DECIDED SUCCESS.

The demonstration in Mustard Spraying conducted by the Ontario Department of Agriculture proved a decided success. A barley field on the farm of D. N. Lucas, Odessa, was sprayed on Monday afternoon, June 19th. Eighty pounds of Iron Sulphate to one barrel of water was applied with a cart sprayer. The cost was $1.50 per acre for material.

On June 24th, Mr. G. B. Curran inspected the field to note results. From the road the difference between the sprayed and unsprayed parts of the field is very noticeable. The unsprayed half is a mass of yellow bloom, and the mustard is ahead of the grain.

On the sprayed portion, only a few scattered bunches of mustard can be seen, and the grain is healthy in color and getting ahead of the mustard that is left. On examining the sprayed mustard, all the leaves are dead and dried up, and the plant is putting all its energy into flowering. However, the stems are dry and brittle, and practically none of the sprayed plants can produce seed. The barley is growing rapidly, and the mustard plants have not grown a particle since the spraying. Mr. Lucas expects to harvest enough extra barley to pay for the spraying two or three times over, and will cut and thrash each part of the field separately to ascertain the increase in yield of barley on the sprayed portion.

Farmers and all interested in the eradication of Mustard are invited to visit the farm of Mr. D. N. Lucas, 5th Concession, Lot 30, Ernestown, and inspect the field.

TILE DRAINAGE.

When in Guelph recently, Mr. G. B. Curran, arranged with Prof. W. H. Day, of the Ontario Agricultural College, to bring the new traction Ditcher purchased by the College, down to this county and give a demonstration in digging tile drains with machinery. The ditcher has been working on the college farm. The following are the conditions under which a demonstration is held:—

(1) The plots must be situated in a locality (township) where little or no drainage has been done. This campaign is intended to reach districts not reached by the survey campaign.

(2) A field of from ten to twelve acres is required. It must lie along a main road, and slope toward the road, so that passersby may observe results. There must be a good outlet reasonably convenient to the field.

(3) The Department of Physics will make the survey, prepare the plans, dig the drains and lay the tile, hold a public drainage demonstration while the drains are being put in, also another the following year when the crops are growing to observe and

OUR ADVOCATE WITH THE FATHER

No Approach to God Except by Jesus, Says Pastor Russell.

Man Needs God—Not In Affliction Merely—Also to Perfect Joy—Many Repelled by Erroneous Creeds—Broken Hearts—Wounded Hearts—Yearning Hearts—The Gospel Message is to Such—It Speaks Peace.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Vancouver, B.C., June 22.—Our Society is once more honored by a visit from Pastor Russell. We report one of his addresses on a topic of vital interest to thoughtful people—How may sinners come into relationship with God? His text was, "We have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous."—1 John 2:1.

Impressively the Pastor reminded us that humanity is so constructed as to have a longing for God and for superhuman care and guidance, especially in life's difficulties. He declared that, phenologically, veneration and spirituality are located in the crown of the head, as thought they should properly dominate the entire being. Notwithstanding the impairment brought to our race through the fall of man, humanity still worships, however much impaired judgment misleads into worshipping unworthily—an image, an idol, a creed, another human being.

The Pastor showed conclusively from the Bible that Satan, man's great enemy, has in various ways attempted to separate us from God and the Bible, and proportionately to darken our understanding with human traditions, creeds, superstitions. In the light of our wonderful day, however, God's time has come for binding Satan and liberating his prisoners.

Here We Meet a Danger.

The moment we begin to exercise our reason, the Adversary seems to redouble his energies to hold us back from the truth. As St. Paul points out, Satan is an adept at putting "light for darkness and darkness for light." When his dupes begin to think and inquire, his method seems to be to pose as a reformer, to mislead them into theories, speculation or into occult systems. Thus many to-day, the Pastor declared, have stepped out of ignorance and superstition merely to be entrapped by other superstitions, or by Agnosticism, Evolution, Higher Criticism. He urged his hearers to be on guard and to hold fast the Word of God.

The Pastor declared the trend of modern thought to be away from the Bible, from thought of personal sin, personal condemnation, a personal Redeemer and personal salvation. The tendency is to think of and discuss civil righteousness, outward moralities, political progress—a social salvation, to be accomplished by moral and intellectual forces. The Pastor would not be understood as opposing any humanitarian work. He declared that even unwise efforts sometimes prove beneficial to their movers, even though failures in themselves, on the

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, June 23.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ended June 21, were 2650 cattle, 1200 sheep and lambs, 1850 hogs and 1625 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1100 cattle, 900 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 850 calves.

Altho the supply of cattle was somewhat larger than a week ago there was no important change in the condition of the market to note, prices being fairly well maintained. The run consisted principally of grass-fed cattle and the quality of the stock was good. A few loads of stable-fed choice steers sold at $7.25 to $7.50 per cwt. The gathering of buyers was larger and there was a good demand from packers and butchers for all grades. Choice grass-fed steers sold at $7 to $7.15, and good steers at $6.50 to $6.75 per cwt. Common stock sold freely, $4.50 to $4.75. Sheep and lambs were weaker and prices are lower. Demand, however, was good at from $4.75 to $5 for ewes and $4 to $4.50 for lambs. Any farmer who has a field that will fill the above requirements is invited to apply to Mr. Curran, and Prof. Day will select the field from the list of applicants. It is expected the ditcher will reach Napanee about August 1st.

Farmers who intend to tile drain may have a drainage survey made on application to the Agricultural Office, Napanee.

The Lion of Janina.

About a century ago London was threatened with a grisly show from Janina. The fame of Ali Pasha was considerable in England, enhanced by Byron's stanzas in "Childe Harold." So when the great Albanian had at last been murdered and his head was exhibited to the public at Constantinople on a dish a merchant of that city thought the head and dish would be a paying sight in London. We need not regret that a former confidential agent of Ali offered the executioner a higher price than the merchant had and obtained the head, with those of Ali's three sons and grandsons. He deposited them near one of the city gates with a tombstone and inscription.—London Spectator.

Just a Suggestion.

A young lawyer appeared before a Washington judge with his umbrella under his arm and his hat on his head. The young man was so agitated that he forgot to put aside his umbrella or to remove his hat. He began speaking, when the court kindly suggested: "Haden't you better raise your umbrella?"—Exchange.

from thought of personal sin, personal condemnation, a personal Redeemer and personal salvation. The tendency is to think of and discuss civil righteousness, outward moralities, political progress—a social salvation, to be accomplished by moral and intellectual forces. The Pastor would not be understood as opposing any humanitarian work. He declared that even unwise efforts sometimes prove beneficial to their movers, even though failures in themselves, on the principle that no man can attempt a good work for another without being himself blessed.

A Personal God and Savior.

The Pastor then showed that modern education had not only undermined the Word of God, but in many instances destroyed faith in a personal Creator, and abolished the thought of the soul's need of a personal Savior, in the Biblical sense. Hence many pose as Christians and declare their faith in a "god of Nature"—whatever that may be. Similarly, the highest concept respecting Jesus is that He was a great preacher, with an uplifting, civilizing message.

All this is unsatisfactory to a hungry soul—mere chaff. We need to get back to the Bible. We need the Bible presentation that God can have no sympathy with sin, and no dealings with sinners, in the way of recognizing them, giving them everlasting life, etc. We need to see that the sentence pronounced upon our first parents, "Dying, thou shalt die," was just, and that death, not torture, is the wages of sin.

We need also to see something of the Love of God, manifested through Jesus. From Him we hear the Message of the Kingdom—that God intends that ultimately Messiah shall become the great King of earth, authorized to lift mankind up out of sin and degradation, and to restore all the willing and obedient to human perfection in a world-wide Eden.

Then comes the gospel invitation to all believers, to become joint-heirs in that Kingdom which is to bless all the families of the earth. This, the Pastor said, is what St. Paul calls "our high calling of God in Christ." Jesus assures us that this class will sit with Him in His Throne and share His glory, in the First Resurrection.

I am convinced, said the Pastor, that many hearts are longing for God. It is one thing to know about God and Jesus, about the Divine Plan, the Selection of the Church and the Millennium, in which Messiah will bless and uplift all mankind. But it is quite a different matter to know how to come to God, how to get into the Church class.

The Pastor realizes that he has a greater responsibility than any other minister because of the twelve millions of intelligent people who read his sermons weekly. He invites correspondence from such.

Port Credit Harbor Bought.

OTTAWA, June 24.—The Dominion Government has purchased a harbor at Port Credit, Ont., for $30,000. It was bought from the owner, Charles Holt of London, England.

While it is not generally known, a system obtained in the old days of selling harbors to private parties, who built wharves, etc., and collected tolls on them. It is the policy of the Government to make the few privately owned harbors public.

For years the Port Credit harbor has been little used except for a few fishing boats.

Heated Air Caused Collapse.

MONTREAL, June 24.—That the wall which fell during a fire here Sunday in the sash factory of Itzweire and Sarkazin and killed four firemen and injured five others, was blown out by an explosion of heated air, was the statement issued by Fire Chief Tremblay yesterday. The fire itself, which did damage now estimated at $150,000, was started, it is believed, by a cigarette butt carelessly flung into a pile of shavings.

Milady's Maid.

All players must sit in a circle except one, who is the lady's maid, and she takes up her position in the center. Then each one takes the name of some article belonging to a lady's toilet, such as chain, watch, ring, brush, comb, mirror or anything you can think of. The maid then says, "My lady is going out and wants her chain," etc. The one who is named gets up and turns round, saying, "Here, my lady," as he or she rises. When the mirror is named all rise and make grimaces and gestures, as though looking into a mirror. When the maid says, "My lady is dressed," all change seats, and the one left out then becomes the maid. Any one failing to answer to his or her name pays a forfeit, and if the maid names an article not selected she must pay a forfeit.

ONTARIO POLITICS

A SHORT CAMPAIGN.

July 14th is the date of the bye-election in North Grey for the Ontario Legislature. This means that polling day is less than three weeks off and a short campaign is, therefore, the order of the day. Both parties, headed by John McQuaker, Liberal Candidate, and Colin Cameron, Conservative nominee, began holding public meetings on Monday, June 23rd and indications point to a great flood of speakers of both Conservatives and Liberals in every part of the Riding.

The most striking feature of the situation is the enthusiasm and confidence with which the Liberals are working. The Constituency is by no means a safe Liberal seat; in fact it has always been a very close Riding and with the exception of the last election when personal considerations made Hon. A. G. McKay's election easy and inevitable, the parties have been almost evenly matched.

The Liberals this time, however, feel that victory will be theirs. The Cabinet scandal involving both Hon. W. J. Hanna and Sir James Whitney has deservedly shaken public confidence in the Government, and when once confidence is shaken as it has been during the last two months, the Government starts on the down-hill road. The Liberal policies are popular in this Riding, not only Abolish the Bar but the whole program of social legislation including Workmen's Compensation and Adequate Factory Laws. The Whitney Government is also unpopular owing to its inefficient policies in Agriculture and Education and it is freely said that the independent voters are, in this election to quite a remarkable degree of unanimity, in accord with Liberal policies and are going to vote to see their ideas carried out.

EASTERN MEETING.

Mr. N. W. Rowell speaks on Thursday, July 3rd, in Alexandria, County of Glengary. This is the first time Mr. Rowell has visited the extreme Eastern end of the Province and his visit is, therefore, creating a great deal of interest. Mr. Hugh Munroe, M. P. P., is the popular Liberal member from Glengary.

LOOKING AHEAD.

By 1950 Canada Will Have Assumed Big Problems.

If Canada had a population of fifty millions then Montreal would probably have a population of two millions; Toronto a population of one and a half millions; Winnipeg and Vancouver one million each, and so on. Do you think that Montreal is planning for that population or that any other of the cities mentioned is making preparations to take care of the people which are sure to come in the next thirty-five years? asks Norman Patterson in The Canadian Courier.

When Canada has fifty million population the Canadian Government will be spending about a billion (or a thousand million) dollars each year instead of 157 millions as at present. Every member of Parliament will have five times as many jobs and positions to hand out to his followers as he has now and five times as many claimants for them. The railways will be carrying about ten times as many people every day as they are carrying now. They will require ten times the number of locomotives, passenger cars, and freight cars. They will have ten times the number of employees. If the Canadian Pacific Railway keeps on growing at the rate it has been growing it will then be

BRIBING OF COURT

ROYAL OFFICIALS ARE PE ED BY THE UNSCRUPULOUS

Merchants Seeking Royal Warrant to Put the British Coat of Arms on Goods Are the Most Frequently Encountered by the King's—Instant Dismissal Meted the Dishonest.

Only those who have had the privilege to serve in the King's Household can realize the temptation thrown in the way of those who are known to be connected official to the court. To the credit of the King's staff, it has been said at once that these temptations are nearly always treated with contempt. A recent incident, in which two officials of the Lord Chamberlain's Department were implicated, however, that sometimes the temptations held out are more than resisted.

Punishment in such a case is and severe. So soon as anyone in the Royal Household it is made perfectly clear to him or her that an attempt to gain personal preference on their position means dismissal, and this rule is never departed from, no matter how important their post may be. No mitigating circumstances are taken into consideration in such a case, and the fact that the confidence of the King has been betrayed is regarded as sufficient to have the culprit removed from court.

It is safe to say that scarcely a day passes but what anyone known connected in any way with the Household, or possessed of influence there, is approached with suggestions that he might benefit himself by falling in with schemes concocted to him. It is not months since one of the best officials of the Lord Chamberlain's Department was offered a cheque for £600 if he could get a royal warrant stating that the firm in question had been specially appointed to supply certain articles to the King.

It was known, of course, to the King that the official in question had access to the forms upon which these warrants were drawn up, and that it would not have been a matter of document which the whole matter reported to the count Knollys, His Majesty's principal private secretary, with the result that the firm who made the proposal was still without the royal warrant and is probably wondering where it is from Buckingham Palace.

It is not always money that is offered to court officials. Advancement is often the bait held before them. A case may be quoted. One of the principal subordinates of the Master of the Horse was approached two or three years ago by a lady of title with a suggestion that she could obtain handsome fees for presenting ladies at court if he would undertake that they should receive the necessary "commands." The lady in question possessed great influence in the official world, and openly promised official a baronetcy if he would do this for her. When he declined to take any part in this scheme, she then threatened with the lady's displeasure, and was bluntly told that she would make it her business to see that he was removed from

FROM HORN TO HOOF.

Probably no single cause tends more to check milk secretion than the failure to remove all the milk at the time of milking, says Hoard's Dairyman.

Cows should be salted at least once a week. The best plan is to have salt under cover where the cows can get to it at will. Rock salt, of course, is best for this purpose.

Roots are perhaps most valuable during the first part of the fattening period, particularly with cattle. From forty to fifty pounds per day may be fed at first; then the amount should be gradually diminished.

Professor Deitrich of the Illinois experiment station says that the proper water supply for a pig ranges from twelve pounds daily per 100 pounds live weight at the time of weaning to four pounds per 100 pounds live weight during the fattening period.

Oats and peas make excellent hay. They may be sown in the spring as soon as the ground can be worked—about one and a half bushels of each to the acre. The peas will be ready to cut about July 1, when the oats are yet in the milk stage and the peas just forming in the pods.

Not Many Infidels.

While seventy thousand Montrealers do not go to church, there are only a dozen infidels in the city, and very few members of other than the orthodox denominations, according to figures made public by the Montreal home visitation committee, which recently in a whirlwind religious census visited 82 per cent. of the city's homes, representing 400,000 people. A remarkably small diversity of religious faith was shown, Roman Catholics being greatly in the lead, although definite comparative figures were not given out. The largest number of children found in any one city family was eighteen, in a Hebrew home.

The census-takers report that aristocratic Westmount has by far the smallest proportion of children to the number of homes of any district in greater Montreal.

Montreal's Imports.

The customs duties collected in the port of Montreal for the month of May broke every record for the harbor of Montreal.

It totalled $2,395,377.30, an increase of $251,111.16 over the same month last year. The previous high water mark was made in October, 1912, when the duties collected amounted to $2,349,003.99.

Butter Output Grows.

Twenty-seven per cent. more butter was made in creameries in Nova Scotia in 1912 than in 1911, and in 1911 there was an increase of 30 per cent. over the previous year.

Everything the farmer needs for spraying, whether fruit trees, potatoes or herrick. Lime Sulphur Solution, Arsenate of Lead, Paris Green, Iron and Copper Sulphate, etc., at Hooper's—Napaneec's Largest Drug Store.

as he has now and five times as many claimants for them. The railways will be carrying about ten times as many people every day as they are carrying now. They will require ten times the number of locomotives, passenger cars, and freight cars. They will have ten times the number of employees. If the Canadian Pacific Railway keeps on growing at the rate it has been growing it will then be paying wages to about 500,000 people a day.

In 1912 Canada produced a little over 200 million bushels of wheat; when she has fifty millions of people she should be producing 1,000 million bushels per annum, or a third more than is now produced annually by either Russia or the United States, the two great wheat-producing countries of the world.

In 1902 we had 18,000 miles of steam railway; in 1912 we had 26,000. In that ten years we added 8,000 miles of railway. If we keep on building railways at that rate we shall have 58,000 miles in 1950, or enough railways to make an iron belt around the waist of old Mother Earth; another around the poles and still have enough left to go twice across Canada.

To-day Canada has only two persons to a square mile, while the United States has 21 and England and Wales 558. By 1950, if we get the fifty million people, we will have fourteen people to the square mile.

To-day Canada has 33 million acres of land under cultivation; in 1950 we should have 150 millions under cultivation if the people do not all flock into the towns and cities. The total value of the wheat crops in Canada last year was estimated at $500,000,000. If our rural population grows proportionately we would be producing at least five times as much each year or a total of twenty-five hundred million dollars worth of grain and other field crops. Picture to yourself the number of trains and steamboats that will be required to transport these crops to their ultimate market.

Canada's foreign trade is increasing at a tremendous rate. The total of the last twelve months is just over 1,000 millions. In 1950, if we keep up our present rate of progress, our foreign trade will be somewhere between five and ten times that amount. Think of the number of steamships that will be coming and going in Canada's harbors to take care of that foreign trade, those exports and imports. It may even be that we will find it necessary to have a Canadian navy to look after and safeguard that tremendous foreign trade.

The total deposits in the chartered banks of Canada now exceed 1,000 millions of dollars. If our population multiplies seven times in the next thirty-five years we will have 7,000 millions on deposit, and we shall be one of the richest countries in the world. In the last ten years the capitalization of the Canadian banks has increased about fifty millions of dollars. Figuring at this rate of growth the total capitalization of our banks in 1950 would be somewhere around 300 or 305 millions of dollars.

This country has been thinking in millions; it must now think in billions.

A Prescription.

that they should receive the new "commands." The lady in question possessed great influence in the official world, and openly promised official a baronetcy if he would take any part in this scheme. Then threatened with the lady's displeasure, and was bluntly that she would make it her business to see that he was removed from position. His retort was most surprising. He went direct to the official chief and laid the whole incident before him, with the result that he continues to hold his position in the Household and the lady's question no longer receives attention to court.

Lord Stamfordham once remarked that "one never knows how far one is until one is appointed to position at court." This is certainly true, since invitations from whom one has had no previous knowledge simply pour in from quarters upon those whose position it is to serve either the King or the Queen. An amusing story was told in this connection. At this time last year an extremely dressed lady went up to an official position at court. The Lord Chamberlain's Deputy in Piccadilly one morning, addressing him by name, shook him warmly by the hand, reproached him for "neglecting her for so long," and him promise he would call upon her on the following Thursday. She then tripped away, leaving the courtier gazing after her in amazement, since he had not, and to this day, the slightest idea of her identity.

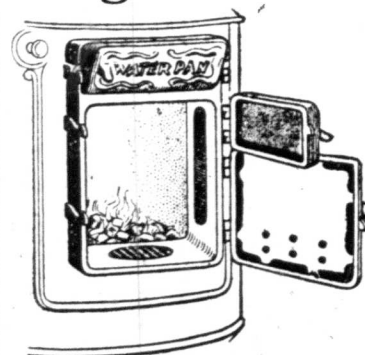

It is not often that an official of the court is so directly approached with an offer of monetary reward for his services in getting a royal warrant as was the case a few days ago. He was written to by a cigarette merchant hailing, it most unnecessary to add, from the other side of the Atlantic, for him samples of their goods, "with the cool intimation that they were well aware that the cigarette were just the thing the King smoke and enjoy," and that for 1,000 that His Majesty's official approached could have cent. of the account as paid. The reply was curt, but deserved. To the effect that the sample had been handed by the courtier chauffeur, who pronounced the bish, and that in those circumstances he did not feel justified in presenting them upon his sovereign.

Good salesmanship Reward

One evening just a few moments before closing time an elderly man whose wife entered a book store in New York city, according to an American publisher quoted in the Bookman. Practically every one had left the store with the exception of one clerk. The lady wanted a particular kind of book for a most particular friend, and the clerk had spent half a day during which time he had taken every book out of the shelves. The husband became impatient, and the book clerk. He was as gentle as a lamb, agreeable as though he were a diamond necklace and was to the entire profit of the sale. She secured just the book she wanted. The man was so impressed with the salesman that he offered him a reward of $20 a week more than he then receiving.

STYLES WITH ODD ORIGINS.

The Old Masculine Trick of Tying the Hair Behind Was the Result of a Childish Prank, and the Beauty Spot
Grew From a Boil on a Lady's Cheek.

That many of the fashions which became famous in their day and have come down to our own were due to chance, or accident is now a matter of history. Interesting are the stories told of the odd origin of certain styles which an unsuspecting world probably thought were intentionally chosen for their beauty or comfort.

The courts of Europe have been especially noted for their sheeplike following of an idea introduced by the reigning monarch, when frequently that idea was evolved to conceal one of the ruler's physical defects. One of the kings of France came to the throne a child of ten. He wore his hair in long ringlets all about the head.
Immediately men and women coiffed themselves likewise. The same monarch was bald at thirty, and, being a lover of all that was beautiful and feminine, he ordered the elaborate wig which was taken up and reveled in during many reigns.

As for the hair being caught in the back and held with a small bow of ribbon, the style beloved of men several hundred years ago, little girls are said to have originated the idea, and accidentally. One day a court leader happened to be visiting, and his hostess was late in arriving in the salon.
The young man fell asleep, and the two children of the noble lady, creeping in,
saw the guest and to play a trick tied his hair all together. The little girls, fearing to be caught, ran away, and the young man never knew of the curious picture the back of his wig presented. Other visitors discovered the garish, laughed at the ribbon, and the young count declared barefacedly that he had so fastened his hair and meant to keep it always so from his neck and shoulders. Within a few days the entire nobility found the scheme so good they adopted the idea.

The pannier was introduced by a queen to cover a misplaced hip bone. It was an actress who finally threw the pannier aside after it had been fashionable half a century. One evening just before she was to appear on the stage the actress discovered that one pannier was entirely drenched in oil.
The dress, it was thought, was spoiled
by a rival.

The actress and her maid quickly thought the matter over, and both together quickly tore off the offending member of the costume. The actress donned the dress, but of course it presented a ridiculous appearance. So the other pannier was removed, and the slim young woman appeared on the stage more supple and graceful than ever. The audience at first gasped, then admired, and the next day
all of London (the scene took place there) decided to imitate the actress and her severe skirt.

The origin of the beauty spot is no less interesting. The Duchess de

Puzzling Relics of Ancient Ways of Living in Ireland.

Curious underground passages called "souterrains" exist in many parts of Ulster. They are built or dug a few feet below the ground and laid out with chambers and possible hiding places or bolting holes, according to more or less well defined plans. They are not large enough for a man to stand upright in. He would have to crawl on his hands and knees to explore them or to make use of them in any way.

Some districts are honeycombed with them. What could they have been used for? Not for living in, though primitive pottery has been found in them; not for the dead, though some Etruscan burial places were not dissimilar, because no bones have been found; possibly for refugees. Some of the souterrains are fifty to seventy feet long.

Irish and local tradition attribute them to the fairies, the good people, the Danes—like the Essex Dene-holes, which are probably only chalk pits—or, in rare instances, to the Picts. But the Danes referred to by the Irish country people are not the modern Danes, but probably the Tuatha de Danaan, a people who are said to have lived in Ireland before the coming of the Celts. They are the "fairies" and are said to have been of small stature, like "children," the country people will tell one. To superstition no doubt is owing the preservation of these most puzzling relics of some bygone way of living.—London Family Herald.

WOLF HUNTS IN LAPLAND.

Reindeer Must Be Protected as They Are the Nation's Wealth.

The Swedish Lapps are said to live entirely with, by and upon their reindeer. A Lapp who owns a thousand deer is a rich man, but as taxes are assessed upon the number of deer he is inclined to underestimate his herd.

The most dangerous enemy of the herd is the wolf, which can kill any deer. A band of wolves can make a rich Lapp poor.

When the snow is deep and soft and it is announced that wolf tracks have been seen in the neighborhood of the deer the swiftest runners on snowshoes prepare for an exciting chase.

The wolf may have a start of a mile or two, but the track it leaves in the deep, soft snow is so conspicuous that the hunters can follow it at their best speed. The wolf, though he may run swiftly, has but a slight chance of escaping his pursuers on their snowshoes.

anted a ridiculous appearance. So the other panner was removed, and the slim young woman appeared on the stage more supple and graceful than ever. The audience at first gasped, then admired, and the next day all of London (the scene took place there) decided to imitate the actress and her severe skirt.

The origin of the beauty spot is no less interesting. The Duchess de Montmorillon suffered with a boil on the cheek and put on a bit of black mixture overnight said to be healing. In the morning she either forgot to wash her face or did not use enough care, so the story goes, and the inat- tentive or malicious servant allowed her mistress to appear "before the world" with her face spotted. Powdered and perfumed, Montmorillon received her callers, who found the black spot charming, so much so that before night they had anointed their faces with the black ointment.

To come down to present times, the feather boa was originated less than twenty years ago in Boston. In an idle moment an apprentice in a feather establishment sewed the discarded bits and ends of poor plumes together and strung them about her neck. The other girls laughed at the trimming, the head of the department found it pretty, and the order was given that no castaways in the form of plumes be thrown in the wastebasket. All parts of the plumes were kept, sewed on to a ribbon, the entire thing curled and long ribbon loops put at each end, and the feather boa was the success of the season.

The uncurled plume was purely the result of an accident. The biggest race of the year, the Grand Prix d'Autuill, was on, and women were there dressed within an inch of their lives. A fearful rainstorm came up, and people were drenched. Plumes that had left home finely curled were wet, and each spiral stood apart. It was not pretty, the effect, but it was original, and one of the milliners, not wishing to take the trouble to have the plumes of all his customers recurled, advised them to allow the garnish to remain as it was.

That week following the Grand Prix d'Autuill saw nothing but straight spiral plumes, and women liked them so much that before the following Sunday, when the Grand Prix-de Long-champ was to be, women who had curled plumes had the wave taken out so that they might appear like the other fashionables. For more than a year the defrissee plume was sought. As a whole fashion is, like in this instance, only the result of an accident. Sometimes it is the outcome of an experiment; but, like the women, it is capricious and changeable.—New York Sun.

A Crank in the Commons.

Mr. Farmer-Atkinson was a curious psychological study. An astute man of business, he was founder and first president of the chamber of shipping of the United Kingdom. But in the house he proved a veritable "crank." One of his habits was to stalk in ghostly fashion from behind the chair, suddenly to utter some unexpected and irrelevant remark in a stage whisper into Speaker Peel's ear and then vanish. Poor Mr. Peel stood it patiently for awhile. At last, however, it got on his nerves. Old parliamentary hands remember the sensation that was caused one night when the speaker was obliged to appeal to the house for "protection" against these persistent annoyances. Soon afterward Mr. Farmer-Atkinson withdrew from public life on grounds of ill health, and Westminster saw him no more.—London Dispatch.

It seemed a very difficult thing to make little Bessie understand that the earth revolved round and round. One day she came in from her playing and said:

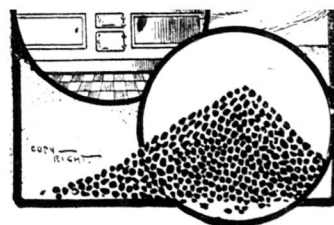

"Mother, I believe the earth does turn round."

"What is it that has convinced you, dear?" asked the mother.

"I can see it whirl," said Bessie, "when I twist up my swing and then untwist."

"Isn't it you that whirls," asked the mother, "instead of the earth?"

"But," explained Bessie, "it goes after I stop."—New York Post.

"Suppose I say he didn't kill himself?" slowly. "Suppose I say he was murdered? Suppose—good God—suppose I killed him myself?"

I drew back in stupefaction, but he hurried on.

"For the last two days I've been wondering—if I did it! He hadn't any weapon. I had one—his. I hated him that day. I had tried to save him and couldn't. My God, Knox, I might have gone off my head and done it—and not remember it. There have been cases like that."

His condition was pitiable. I looked around for some whisky, but the best I could do was a little port on the sideboard. When I came back he was sitting with bent head, his forehead on his palms.

"I've thought it all out," he said painfully. "My mother had spells of emotional insanity. Perhaps I went there, without knowing it, and killed him. I can see him, in the night, when I daren't sleep, toppling over on to that table, with a bullet wound in his head, and I am in the room, and I have his revolver in my pocket!"

"You give me your word you have no conscious recollection of hearing a shot fired."

"My word before heaven," he said fervently. "But I tell you, Knox, he had no weapon. No one came out of that room as I went in and yet he was only swaying forward, as if I had shot him one moment and caught him as he fell the next. I was dazed. I don't remember yet what I told the police."

"Wardrop," I asked, trying to fix his wavering eyes with mine, "do you own a 32 caliber revolver?"

"Yes."

I was startled beyond any necessity, under the circumstances. Many people have 32's.

"That is, I had," he corrected himself. "It was in the leather bag that was stolen at Bellwood."

"I can relieve your mind of one thing," I said. "If your revolver was stolen with the leather bag you had nothing to do with the murder. Fleming was shot with a 32." He looked greatly relieved, then believed.

"Now, then," I pursued, "suppose Mr. Fleming had an enemy, a relentless one who would stoop to anything to compass his ruin. In his position he would be likely to have enemies. This person, let us say, knows what you carry in your grip and steals it, taking

"Eleven twenty-two," he repeated, but I had not missed his change of expression when I said women.

"Also," I went on, "I want you to tell me who was with you the night you tried to break into the house at Bellwood."

He was taken completely by surprise. When he had gathered himself together his perplexity was overdone.

"With me!" he repeated. "I was alone, of course."

"I mean—the woman at the gate." He lost his composure altogether then.

"There was a woman," I persisted, "and, what is more, Wardrop, at this minute you believe she took your Russian leather bag and left a substitute."

He fell into the trap.

"But she couldn't," he quavered. "I've thought until my brain is going, and I don't see how she could have done it."

He became sullen when he saw what he had done, refused any more information and left almost immediately.

Fred came soon after, and in the meantime I had made some notes like this:

- (1) Examine warehouse and yard;
- (2) attempt to trace Carter; (3) see station agent at Bellwood; (4) inquire Wardrop's immediate past; (5) take Wardrop to Dr. Anderson, the specialist; (6) Send Margery violets.

Burton's idea of exploiting Miss Jane's disappearance began to bear fruit the next morning. I went to the office early.

Jane had been seen in a hundred different places. One perhaps was right. Which one?

It was not until noon, however, that anything concrete developed. Two men walked in almost at the same time. One was a motorman in his official clothes, brass buttons and patches around the pockets. The other was a taxicab driver. Both had the uncertain gait of men who by occupation are unused to anything stationary under them, and each eyed the other suspiciously. The motorman claimed priority by a nose, so I took him first into my private office. His story was as follows:

"On the night in question, Thursday of the week before, he took his car out of the barn for the 11 o'clock run. Barney was his conductor. They went from the barn at Hays street downtown, and then started out for Wynton. The controller blew out, and two or three things went wrong; all told they lost forty minutes. They got to Wynton at 2:05; their time there was 1:25."

The car went to the bad again at Wynton and he and Barney tinkered with it until 2:40. They got it in shape to go back to the barn, but that was all. Just as they were ready to start a passenger got on, a woman, alone—a small woman with a brown veil. She wore a black dress or a suit—he was vague about everything but the color, and he noticed her especially because she was fidgety and excited. Half a block further a man boarded the car and sat across from the woman. Barney said afterward that the man tried twice to speak to the woman, but she looked away each time. No, he hadn't heard what he said.

The man got out when the car went into the barn, but the woman stayed on. He and Barney got another car and took it out, and the woman went

"What did he say to the woman?" I asked.

"He didn't say much. Before he closed the door he said, 'You have put me in a terrible position,' or something like that. From the traveling bag and all, I thought perhaps it was an elopement, and the lady had decided to throw him down."

"Was it a young woman or an old one," I asked again. This time the cabby's tone was assured.

"Young," he asserted, "slim and quick; dressed in black, with a black veil. Soft voice. She got out at Market square, and I have an idea she took a crosstown car there."

"I hardly think it was Miss Maitland," I said. "She was past sixty, and besides, I don't think she went that way. Still, it is worth following up."

He fumbled in his pocket and after a minute brought up a small black pocketbook and held it out to me. It was the small coin purse out of a leather handbag.

"She dropped this in the cab, sir," he said. "I took it home to the missus—not knowing what else to do with it. It contained only that bit of paper."

I opened the purse and took out a small white card without engraving. On it was written in a pencil the figures, "C 1122."

When the cabman had gone I sat down and tried to think things out. Of the two stories the taxicab driver's was the more probable, as far as Miss Jane was concerned. Knowing her childlike nature, her timidity, her shrinking and shamefaced fear of the dark, it was almost incredible that she would walk the three miles to Wynton voluntarily and from there lose herself in the city. Besides, such an explanation would not fit the blood stains or the fact that she had gone, as far as we could find out, in her night clothes.

Still, she had left the village that night, either by cab or on foot. If the driver had been correct in his time, however, the taxicab was almost eliminated. He said the woman got into the cab at 1:30. It was between 1:30 and 1:45 when Margery heard the footsteps in the attic.

I think for the first time it came to me, that day, that there was at least a possibility that Miss Jane had not been attacked, robbed and injured; that she had left home voluntarily, under stress of great excitement. But if she had, why?

I was not proud of the part I played. So far I had blundered. It seemed to me, at every point where a blunder was possible. I had been a half hour too late to save Allan Fleming. I had been up and awake, and Miss Jane had got out of the house under my very nose. Last and by no means least, I had waited thirty-five years to find the right woman, and when I found her some one else had won her. I was in the depths that day when Burton came in.

He walked into the office jauntily and put something on the desk in front of me. It was a Russian leather bag.

"The leather bag!" he pointed proudly. "It was found in Boston."

It was not locked, and I got it open in a minute. As I had expected, it was empty.

"Then—perhaps Wardrop was telling the truth," I exclaimed. "By Jove, Burton, he was robbed by the woman in the cab, and he can't tell about her nerved herself to the interview. It was evident that there was grief. I saw now that she was mourning.

"Do you mean," I asked in a low, "that Mr. Fleming married her a second time?"

"He married me three years ago in Plattsburg. I came from there the night I couldn't leave before."

"Does Miss Fleming know this second marriage?"

"No. Nobody knew about it. I had to put up with a great deal. Knox. It's a hard thing for a woman to know that people are talking about her and all the time she's married tight as ring and book can do it."

"I suppose," I hazarded, "if the case you have come about is true?"

"Estate!" Her tone was scornful. "I guess I'll take what's coming to me, as far as that goes, and it be much. No, I came to ask they mean by saying Allan Fleming killed himself."

"Don't you think he did?"

"I know he did not," she said. "Not only that, I know who it was Schwartz—Henry Schwartz. You don't know Schwartz. I married him for fifteen years. I married him when he had a saloon in the ward, at Plattsburg. The next he was alderman. I didn't expect those days to see him riding around in an automobile, not but what he was making money, for Henry Schwartz was a money maker. That's why he's of the state now."

"And you divorced him?"

"He was a brute," she said. "He wanted me to go with him, and I told him I would die. I took a big house and kept it for suits for gentlemen. Mr. Fleming lived there and—he married me years ago. He and Schwartz had stood together, but they hated each other."

"Schwartz?" I meditated. "Did he happen to know if Senator Schwartz was in Plattsburg at the time of Mr. Fleming's death?"

"He was here in Manchester."

"He had threatened Mr. Fleming's life?"

"He had already tried to kill the day we were married. He shot him twice, but not deep enough. I looked at her in wonder. For a woman, not extraordinarily handsome, two men had fought and one had—according to her story.

CHAPTER XIV.

Edith's Cousin.

"I CAN prove everything I want to," she went on rapidly. "I have letters from Mr. Fleming telling me what to do in case he was shot down. I have papers—can't remember—that would put Schwartz in the penitentiary—that is," she said. "I did have them. Mr. Fleming took them away."

"Aren't you afraid for yourself?"

"Yes, I'm afraid—afraid he'll get back yet. It would please him to see me crawl back on my knees."

"But he cannot force you to go to him."

"Yes, he can." She shivered.

Fleming had been shot. Schwartz had been in the city about the time he was shot. He had threatened Fleming before, but a political peace had been patched. Schwartz knew

"Now, then," I pursued, "suppose Mr. Fleming had an enemy, a relentless one who would stoop to anything to compass his ruin. In his position he would be likely to have enemies. This person, let us say, knows what you carry in your grip and steals it, taking away the funds that would have helped to keep the lid on Fleming's mismanagement for a time. In the grip is your revolver. Would you know it again?"

He nodded affirmatively. "This person—this enemy finds the revolver, pockets it and at the first opportunity, having ruined Fleming, proceeds humanely to put him out of his suffering. Is it farfetched?"

"There were a dozen—a hundred—people who would have been glad to ruin him." His gaze wavered again suddenly. It was evident that I had renewed an old train of thought.

"For instance?" I suggested, but he was on guard again.

"You forget one thing, Knox," he said after a moment. "There was nobody else who could have shot him. The room was empty."

"Nonsense," I replied. "Don't forget the warehouse."

"The warehouse?"

"There is no doubt in my mind that he was shot from there. He was facing the open window, sitting directly under the light, writing. A shot fired through a broken pane of one of the warehouse windows would meet every requirement of the case—the empty room, the absence of powder marks, even the fact that no shot was heard. There was a report, of course, but the noise in the clubhouse and the thunderstorm outside covered it."

"By George!" he exclaimed. "The warehouse, of course. I never thought of it!" He was relieved, for some reason.

"It's a question now of how many people knew he was at the club and which of them hated him enough to kill him."

"Clarkson knew it," Wardrop said, "but he didn't do it."

"Why?"

"Because it was he who came to the door of the room while the detective and you and I were inside and called Fleming."

CHAPTER XIII.

Eleven Twenty-two Again.

I PULLED out my pocketbook and took out the scrap of paper Margery had found pinned to the pillow in her father's bedroom. "Do you know what that means?" I asked, watching Wardrop's face. "That was found in Mr. Fleming's room two days after he left home. A similar scrap was found in Miss Jane Maitland's room when she disappeared. When Fleming was murdered he was writing a letter. He said, 'The figures have followed me here.' When we know what those figures mean, Wardrop, we know why he was killed and who did it."

He shook his head hopelessly. "I do not know," he said, and I believed him.

"You can help this thing in two ways," I told him. "I am going to give you something to do; you will have less time to be morbid. Find out, if you can, all about Fleming's private life in the last dozen years, especially the last three. See if there are any women mixed up in it, and try to find out something about this eleven twenty-two."

and sat across from the woman. Barney said afterward that the man tried twice to speak to the woman, but she looked away each time. No, he hadn't heard what he said.

The man got out when the car went into the barn, but the woman stayed on. He and Barney got another car and took it out, and the woman went with them. She made a complete round trip this time, going out to Wynton and back to the end of the line downtown. It was just daylight when she got off at last, at First and Day streets.

Asked if he had thought at the time that the veiled woman was young or old, he said he had thought she was probably middle aged. Very young or very old women would not put in the night riding in a street car. Yes, he had had men who rode around a couple of times at night, mostly to sober up before they went home. But he never saw a woman do it before.

On the night of the previous Thursday the chauffeur had been engaged to take a sick woman from a downtown hotel to a house at Bellwood. The woman's husband was with her, and they went slowly to avoid jolting. It was after 12 when he drove away from the house and started home. At a corner—he did not know the names of the streets—a woman hailed the cab and asked him if he belonged in Bellwood or was going to the city. She had missed the last train. When he told her he was going into town, she promptly engaged him and showed him where to wait for her, a narrow road off the main street.

"I waited an hour," he finished, "before she came. I dropped to sleep or I would have gone without her. About half past 1 she came along, and a gentleman with her. He put her in the cab, and I took her to the city. When I saw in the paper that a lady had disappeared from Bellwood that night, I knew right off that it was my party."

"Would you know the man again?"

"I would know his voice, I expect, sir. I could not see much. He wore a slouch hat and had a traveling bag of some kind."

"The leather bag," he pointed proudly. "It was found in Boston."

It was not locked, and I got it open in a minute. As I had expected, it was empty.

"Then—perhaps Wardrop was telling the truth," I exclaimed. "By Jove, Burton, he was robbed by the woman in the cab, and he can't tell about her on account of Miss Fleming. She made a haul, for certain."

I told him then of the two women who had left Bellwood on the night of Miss Jane's disappearance and showed him the purse and its inclosure. The C puzzled him as it had me. "It might be anything," he said as he gave it back, "from a book, chapter and verse in the Bible to a prescription for rheumatism at a drug store. As to the lady in the cab, I think perhaps you are right," he said, examining the interior of the bag, where Wardrop's name in ink told its story.

"How on earth did you get the bag?" I asked.

"It was a coincidence. There have been a shrewd lot of baggage thieves in two or three eastern cities lately, mostly Boston. The method, the police say, was something like this—one of them, the chief of the gang, would get a wagon, dress like an expressman, and go round the depots looking at baggage. He would make a mental note of the numbers, go away and forge a check to match, and secure the pieces he had taken a fancy to. Then he merely drove around to headquarters, and the trunk was rifled. The police got on, raided the place and found, among others, our Russia leather bag. It was shipped back, empty, to the address inside, Bellwood."

"At Bellwood? Then how?"

"It came while I was lunching with Miss Letitia," he said easily. "We're very chummy—thick as thieves. What I want to know is"—disregarding my astonishment—"where is the hundred thousand?"

"Find the woman."

"Did you ever hear of Anderson, the nerve specialist?" he asked, without apparent relevancy.

"I have been thinking of him," I answered. "If we could get Wardrop there on some plausible excuse it would take Anderson about ten minutes, with his instruments and experimental psychology, to know everything Wardrop ever forgot."

"I'll go on one condition," Burton said, preparing to leave. "I'll promise to get Wardrop and have him on the spot at 2 o'clock tomorrow."

About 4 o'clock a woman came who refused to be turned away. She was of medium height, quietly dressed and fairly handsome. My first impression was favorable. She moved with a certain dignity, and she was not laced, crimped or made up. I am more sophisticated now. The lady who tells me things says that the respectable women nowadays outrage, outcimp and outlace the unrespectable.

However, the illusion was gone the moment she began to speak. Her voice was heavy, throaty, expressionless. She threw it like a weapon. I am perfectly honest in saying that for a moment the surprise of her voice outweighed the remarkable thing she was saying.

"I am Mrs. Allan Fleming," she said, with a certain husky defiance.

"I beg your pardon," I said after a minute. "You mean the Allan Fleming who has just died?"

She nodded. I could see she was unable just then to speak. She had me crawl back on my knees."

"But he cannot force you to go to him."

"Yes, he can," she shivered.

Fleming had been shot. She had been in the city about though bank. He had threatened before, but a political peace been patched. Schwartz knew White Cat. That was all.

"I know a lot about inside po she said as she got up. "I have the state divided up with the my table and served around with dessert, and I can tell you some you don't know about your White Cat. A back staircase leads to one upstairs rooms and shuts off a locked door. It opens below, side entrance, not supposed to be. Only a few know of it. Henry was found dead at the foot of staircase."

"He shot himself, didn't he?"

"The police said so," she said with her grim smile. "There is a thing as murdering a man by him to suicide."

She wrote an address on a card gave it to me.

"Just a minute," I said as she about to go. "Have you ever Mr. Fleming speak of the Misset land?"

"They were his first wife's. No, he never talked of them, but believe just before he left Plattsb tried to borrow some money them."

"And failed?"

"The oldest one telegraphed a fusil, collect," she said, smilingly.

"There is something else," I said. "Did you ever hear of the number en twenty-two?"

"No—or—why, yes"—she said, "is the number of my house."

It seemed rather ridiculous when had gone, and I sat down to sleep over. It was anti-climax to the least. If the mysterious n

That night, at the most peaceful spot I had ever known—Fred's home—occurred another inexplicable affair, one that left us all with racked nerves and listening, fearful ears.

That was to be Margery's last evening at Fred's. Edith had kept her as long as she could, but the girl felt that her place was with Miss Letitia. Edith was desolate.

Margery and I were alone.

Perhaps I was morbid about the ring. It seemed to me she lifted her hand and looked at it.

"Harry Wardrop was here last night," I said, poking down the log with my heel.

"Here?"

"Yes, I suppose I was wrong, but I did not say you were here."

She looked at me closely out of the most beautiful eyes I ever saw.

"I'm not afraid to see him," she said proudly, "and he ought not to be afraid to see me."

"In justice to him," I said, "and because I want to fight fair I tell you tonight that I don't believe he knows anything about your father's death and that I believe he was robbed that night at Bellwood."

"What about the pearls he sold at Plattsburg?" she asked suddenly.

"I think when the proper time comes he will tell about that too, Margery." I did not notice my use of her name until too late. If she heard she failed to resent it. "After all, if you love him hardly anything else matters, does it? How do we know but that he was in trouble and that Aunt Jane herself gave them to him?"

She looked at me with a little perplexity.

"You plead his cause very well," she said. "Did he ask you to speak to me?"

"I won't run a race with a man who is lame," I said quietly. "Ethically I ought to go away and leave you to your dreams, but I am not going to do it. If you love Wardrop as a woman ought to love the man she marries then marry him and I hope you will be happy. If you don't—no, let me finish. I have made up my mind to clear him if I can, to bring him to you with a clear slate. Then—I know it is audacious, but I am going to come, too, and—I'm going to plead for myself then unless you send me away."

She sat with her head bent, her color coming and going nervously. Now she looked up at me with what was the ghost of a smile.

"It sounds like a threat," she said in a low voice. "And you—I wonder if you always get what you want?"

Then, of course, Fred came in and fell over a hassock looking for matches. Edith opened the door of the den and called him to her irritably, but Fred declined to leave the wood fire and settled down in his easy chair. After awhile Edith came over and joined us, but she snubbed Fred the entire evening to his bewilderment. And when conversation lagged during the evening that followed I tried to remember what I had said. She had not been angry and she had understood. Blessed be the woman that understands!

We broke up for the night about 11. Mrs. Butler had come down for awhile, and had even played a little, something of Tchaikowsky's, a singing, plaintive theme that brought sadness back into Margery's face.

other lay relaxed on the white cover. A folded towel had been laid across her face, and when I jerked it away I saw she was breathing very slowly, stertorously, with her eyes partly open and fixed.

I threw up all the windows before I roused the family downstairs and saw the silver was intact and the back kitchen door open. And then the doctor came, and I was put out in the hall.

Not until the doctor came out to me and said she was better and would I call a maid to make some strong black coffee did I come out of my stupor. The chance of doing something, anything, made me determine to make the coffee myself. They still speak of that coffee at Fred's.

It was Edith who brought Mrs. Butler to my mind. Fred had maintained that she had fled before the intruders and probably was in some closet or corner of the upper floor. It was I who found her, after all, lying full length on the grass in the little square yard back of the house. She was in a dead faint and was a much more difficult patient than Margery.

I Saw She Was Breathing Very Slowly.

We could get no story from either of them that night. It was a strange experience—the night intrusion without robbery as a motive. If Margery knew or suspected the reason for the outrage she refused to say. As for Mrs. Butler, to mention the occurrence put her into hysteria. It was Fred who put forth the most startling theory of the lot.

"By George," he said the next morning when we had failed to find tracks in the yard and Edith had reported every silver spoon in its place, "by George, it wouldn't surprise me if the lady in the grave clothes did it herself. There isn't anything a hysterical woman won't do to rouse your interest in her if it begins to flag. How did any one get in through that kitchen door when it was locked inside and bolted? I tell you she opened it herself."

I did not like to force Margery's confidence, but I believed that the out-

"If I tell you something nice, Jack, will you make it a room size rug?"

"Room size it is."

"Then, Margery's engagement ring was stolen last night, and when I commiserated her she said, 'Dear me, the lamp's out and the coffee is cold!'"

"Remarkable speech under the circumstances," said Fred.

Edith rang the bell and seemed to be thinking. "Perhaps we'd better make it four small rugs instead of one large one."

"Not a rug until you have told me what Margery said," firmly.

"Oh, that! Why, she said it really didn't matter about the ring. She had never cared much about it anyway."

"But that's only a matter of taste," I protested, somewhat disappointed. But Edith got up and patted me on the top of my head.

"Silly!" she said. "If the right man came along and gave her a rubber teething ring she'd be crazy about it for his sake."

Edith took me upstairs to measure for the Shirvan, Edith being a person who believes in obtaining a thing while the desire for it is in its first bloom. Across the hall Fred was talking to Margery through the transom.

"Mustard leaves are mighty helpful," he was saying. "I always take 'em on shipboard. And cheer up. Land's in sight."

I would have given much for Fred's ease of manner when, a few minutes later, Edith, having decided on four Shirvans and a hall runner, she took me to the door of Margery's room. She was very still and pale.

"I hope you are better," I said.

She said she was a little better. I, who have a local reputation of a sort before a jury, I could not think of another word to say. I stood there for a minute uneasily, with Edith poking me with her finger to go inside the door and speak and act like an intelligent human being. But I only muttered something about a busy day before me and fled. It was singular, but as I stood in the doorway I had a vivid mental picture of Edith's description of me, sitting up puppy-like to beg for a kind word and wiggling with delight when I got it. If I slunk into my office that morning like a dog scoured to his kennel Edith was responsible.

CHAPTER XV.

Back to Bellwood.

At the office I found this note from Miss Letitia:

Mr. John Knox:
Dear Sir—Kindly oblige me by coming to see me as soon as you get this. Some things have happened. Not that I think they are worth a row of pins, but Hepsibah is an old fool, and she says she did not put the note in the milk bottle. Yours very respectfully,

LETITIA ANN MAITLAND.

I had an appointment with Burton for the afternoon to take Wardrop, if we could get him on some pretext, to Dr. Anderson. That day, also, I had two cases on the trial list. I got Humphreys across the hall to take them over, and evading Hawes' resentful blink I went on my way to Bellwood. It was nine days since Miss Jane had disappeared. On my way out in the train I jotted down the things that had happened in that time: Allan Fleming had died and been buried; the Borough bank had failed; some one had got into the Fleming house and gone through the papers there; Clarkson had killed himself; we had found that Wardrop

"back on my knees." "He cannot force you to go back," he can." She shivered. "He had been shot," Schwartz said in the city about the Borink. He had threatened Fleming, but a political peace had attached. Schwartz knew the Cat. That was all. "I saw a lot about inside politics," I said as she got up. "I have seen it divided up with the roast at the table and served around with the wine and I can tell you something about your White Cat. The staircase leads to one of the rooms and shuts off with a door. It opens below, out a passage, not supposed to be used. I know it. Henry Butler and dead at the foot of that staircase. Did he not?" "The police said so," she replied, with a grim smile. "There is such a man by driving suicide." "I wrote an address on a card and to me." "A minute," I said as she was to go. "Have you ever heard much speak of the Misses Maitland?" "They were his first wife's sisters. They never talked of them, but I best before he left Plattsburg he borrowed some money from them." "I failed?" "The oldest one telegraphed the recollect," she said, smiling faintly.

"It is something else," I said. "I never hear of the number eleven-two?" "Or—why, yes"—she said. "It is number of my house." "It seemed rather ridiculous when she said, and I sat down to think it was anti-climax to say the number. If the mysterious number

"going to plead for myself." "I only the address of this very woman, then—it was probably of Schwartz was true enough. I could not reconcile myself to it, and I imagine Schwartz, with at bulk skulking around, pin-not being angry and she had understood. Blessed be the woman that understands!

We broke up for the night about 11. Mrs. Butler had come down for a while, and had even played a little, something of Tschalkowsky's, a singing, plaintive theme that brought sadness back into Margery's face.

Fred and I sat in the library for a while after the rest had gone, and I told him a little of what I had learned that afternoon.

"A second wife," he said, "and a primitive type, eh? Well, did she shoot him or did Schwartz? The Lady or the Democratic Tiger?"

"The Tiger," I said firmly.

"The Lady," said Fred, with equal assurance.

Fred closed the house with his usual care. Then we went up to bed.

My bedroom was over the library, and Mrs. Butler and Margery Fleming had connecting rooms across the hall. Fred and Edith slept in the nursery wing so they would be near the children. In the square upper hall there was a big reading table, a lamp and some comfortable chairs.

I was awakened by the pungent acrid smell of smoke. My cigarette had dropped from my hand still lighted and, as is the way with cigarettes, determined to burn to the end. In so doing it had fired my bed, the rug under the bed and pretty nearly the man on the bed. It took some sharp work to get it all out without rousing the house. Then I stood amid the wreckage and looked ruefully at Edith's pretty room.

Three pitchers of water on the bed had made it an impossible couch. I put on a dressing gown and, with a blanket over my arm, I went out to hunt some sort of place to sleep. I decided on the davenport in the hall just outside, and as quietly as I could I put a screen around it and settled down for the night.

I was awakened by the touch of a hand on my face. I started, I think, and the hand was jerked away. I am not sure; I was still drowsy. The hall was dark and quiet. When I found no one I concluded it had been only a vivid dream. Then I noticed a heavy, sweetish odor in the air. The smell was almost nauseating. For some reason or other—association of certain odors with certain events—I found myself recalling the time I had a wisdom tooth taken out and that when I came around I was being sat on by the dentist and his assistant, and the latter had a black eye. Then suddenly I knew. The sickly odor was chloroform!

I had the light on in a moment and was rapping at Margery's door. It was locked, and I got no answer. A pale light shone over the transom, but everything was ominously quiet beyond the door. I went to Mrs. Butler's door next. It was unlocked and partly open. One glance at the empty bed and the confusion of the place and I rushed without ceremony through the connecting door into Margery's room.

The atmosphere was reeking with chloroform. The girl was in bed, apparently sleeping quietly. One arm was thrown up over her head, and the lady in the grave clothes did it herself. There isn't anything a hysterical woman won't do to rouse your interest in her if it begins to flag. How did any one get in through that kitchen door when it was locked inside and bolted? I tell you she opened it herself."

I did not like to force Margery's confidence, but I believed that the outrage was directly for the purpose of searching her room, perhaps for papers that had been her father's. Mrs. Butler came around enough by morning to tell a semiconnected story, in which she claimed that two men had come in from a veranda roof and tried to chloroform her.

The inability of Margery Fleming to tell who had chloroformed her, and Mrs. Butler's white face and brooding eyes made a very respectable mystery out of the affair. Only Fred, Edith and I came down to breakfast that morning.

"Did you find anything, Fred?" Edith asked. Fred did not reply, so she repeated the question with some emphasis.

"Eh—what?" Fred inquired, peering around the corner of the paper.

"Did—you—find—any—clue?"

"Yes, dear—that is, no. Nothing to amount to anything. Upon my soul, Jack, if I wrote the editorials of this paper I'd say something." He subsided into inarticulate growls behind the paper, then I heard a snuffle distinctly. Edith was crying—pouring cream into a coffee cup and feeling blindly for the sugar, with her pretty face twisted and her pretty eyes obscured. In a second I was up, had crumpled the newspapers, including Fred's, into a ball, and had lifted him bodily out of his chair.

"When I am married," I said fiercely, jerking him around to Edith and pushing him into a chair beside her, "if I ever read the paper at breakfast when my wife is bursting for conversation, may I have some good and faithful friend who will bring me back to a sense of my duty." I drew a chair to Edith's other side. "Now, let's talk," I said.

Fred had taken her hand and was patting it gently, the while his eye sought the headlines on the wad of morning paper.

"You burned that blue rug," she said to me disconsolately, with a threat of fresh tears. "It took me ages to find the right shade of blue."

"I will buy you that Shirvan you wanted," I hastened to assure her.

"Yes, to take away when you get married." There is a hint of the shrew in all good women.

"I will buy the Shirvan and not get married."

Here, I regret to say, Edith suddenly laughed.

"You!" she chortled, and pointed one slim finger at me mockingly. "You who are so mad about one girl that you love all women for her sake! You, who go white instead of red when she comes into the room! You, who have let your practice go to the dogs to be near her and then never speak to her when she's around, but sit with your mouth open like a puppy begging for candy."

"Honestly, Edith, do I do that?" I gasped. She leaned over and kissed Fred.

"Women like men to be awful fools about them," she said. "That's why I'm so crazy about Freddie." He writhed.

I went on my way to bed. It was nine days since Miss Jane had disappeared. On my way out in the train I jotted down the things that had happened in that time: Allan Fleming had died and been buried; the Borough bank had failed; some one had got into the Fleming house and gone through the papers there; Clarkson had killed himself; we had found that Wardrop had sold the pearls; the leather bag had been returned; Fleming's second wife had appeared, and some one had broken into my own house and, intentionally or not, had almost sent Margery Fleming over the borderland.

It seemed to me everything pointed in one direction to a malignity against Fleming that extended itself to the daughter. I thought of what the woman who claimed to be the dead man's second wife had said the day before. If the staircase she had spoken of opened into the room where Fleming was shot, and if Schwartz was in town at the time, then, in view of her story that he had already tried once to kill him, the likelihood was that Schwartz was at least implicated.

If Wardrop knew that why had he not denounced him?

Granting that Schwartz had killed Fleming—then who was the woman with Wardrop the night he was robbed? Why did he take the pearls and sell them? How did the number eleven twenty-two come into Aunt Jane's possession? How did the leather bag get to Boston? Who had chloroformed Margery? Who had been using the Fleming house while it was closed? Most important of all now—where was Aunt Jane?

The house at Bellwood looked almost cheerful in the May sunshine as I went up the walk. When I stood once more in the straight hall I listened involuntarily for the tap of Miss Jane's small feet on the stairs. Instead, came Bella's heavy tread and a request from Miss Letitia that I go upstairs.

The old lady was sitting by a window of her bedroom. She did not appear to be feeble. The only change I noticed was a relaxation in the severe tidiness of her dress. I guessed that Miss Jane's exquisite neatness had been responsible for the white ruchings, the soft caps and the spotless shoulder shawls that had made lovely their latter years.

"You've taken your own time about coming, haven't you?" Miss Letitia asked sourly. "If it hadn't been for that cousin of yours you sent here, Burton, I'd have been driven to sending for Amelia Miles, and when I send for Amelia Miles for company I'm in a bad way."

"I have had a great deal to attend to," I said as loud as I could. "I came some days ago to tell you Mr. Fleming was dead. After that we had to bury him and close the house. It's been a very sad"—

"Did he leave anything?" she interrupted. "It isn't sad at all unless he didn't leave anything."

"He left very little. The house, perhaps, and I regret to have to tell you that a woman came to me yesterday, who claims to be a second wife."

"Then," she said, with a snap, "there's one other woman in the world as big a fool as my sister Martha was. What do you hear about Jane?"

"The last time I was here," I shouted, "you thought she was dead. Have you changed your mind?"

HENS' SODA FOUNTAIN.

Give Them a Convenient Watering Place, One That Keeps Clean.

A convenient place should be provided for water for the hens. It is best to construct a small stand about one foot above the floor and place the water dish on this. This stand can be constructed in the partition so that the hens in two pens drink from one dish. It is, however, usually better to give each pen a separate drinking dish.

The water stand should be placed where it is light and also where it is convenient to empty the dish and refill it. As a rule, the water dish will keep cleaner if near the south side of the building, as the hens scratch the litter toward the north much more than toward the front of the house. A hen faces the light usually when digging in the straw for her feed, and the result is that the litter works back.

There are numerous drinking devices on the market, many of which are valuable. A large number of farmers, however, use either a small pail or pan. A low pail makes a very convenient water dish, as the bail enables it to be readily handled with one hand.

A pan as shown in the cut also makes a convenient watering dish. Care should be taken not to use watering devices of any kind which have parts that cannot be readily cleaned. A dirty drinking dish is frequently a source of disease and should never be permitted in any poultry house.

Attention to Colt's Feet.

Don't forget to give the colt's feet attention. There is always a reason for a poor set of limbs. It may be hereditary, but it is generally carelessness on the part of the owner who did not

KEEP A RECORD.

Many farmers set out trees each year and in a year entirely forget what variety was set there. They have to wait until fruiting time and then guess at the name.

A good way is to write down the date when set, variety of fruit and exact position, something like this:

March 1, set apple trees, Jones' nursery, back field; first row, first six trees, Northern Spy; next two, Fallwater, etc. Then you have the exact data, Beats guessing or forgetting. — Farm and Fireside.

THEY THREW AWAY CASH.

Sold Bull Before Learning His Value From His Daughters.

The bull when bought must be judged by his breeding, conformation, etc., but his real value is not known until his heifers come into milk. It is the opinion of the National Stockman and Farmer that when a dairy bred bull is purchased he should be kept in the herd until his heifers become producers. So to do may result in retaining him at the head of the herd or, if sold, in giving him an extra value—this in case he proves to be a superior animal. A writer tells of his experience, and from it the lesson can be drawn. He presents the record of his dairy for the year 1912 and then says:

"Near and at the head of the list are the cows Bessie, Lou, Lapple and Olga, half sisters. They are all cows that gave over 2,000 pounds more than their dams, and we made the fatal mistake of slaughtering their sire because he was so cross. The bull did not cost a great deal of money when we bought him, but we must acknowledge that it cost us no little worry to hold him and finally had some ribs loosened at his instance, then decided to do away with him, and did—one of the mistakes of our life, for had we known then what we do now it would have taken thousands of dollars to take him from the farm. We should have kept him had we been compelled to build a stone wall around him to keep him in control. Later we bought as much of that blood in a sire as we could possibly get, and while we have not as yet proof of his value, except from the looks of the calves, we paid many times the price of the original bull."

The soil cannot continue to produce good crops if you take off all of the vegetable matter and return nothing.

ALFALFA AS A MILK MAKER.

Compares Favorably With Timothy, Cottonseed Meal, Wheat Bran, Etc.

An Illinois experiment station test showed that with an acre yield of four tons of alfalfa hay and one and one-half tons of timothy, the timothy worth $10 per ton, an acre of alfalfa was worth $68.44 more than an acre of timothy in milk production under the conditions of the experiment and with milk at $1.20 per 100 pounds.

post is large the arms can be sprung apart so that the points can be driven in on each side. The lever should be sufficiently long and strong, and the leverage block may be a separate short piece of wood.

For the Sake of the Young Pig.

Plenty of exercise is important for the pregnant sow. It should be insisted upon and provided in the way the breeder finds best adapted to his situation. A large pasture is not always available, but the breeder may secure results by arranging the house at one end of the hog lot and the feeding floor at the other end or by giving the sows water in such a way that to procure it they will be compelled to walk some distance a number of times each day. — Coburn's "Swine in America."

What Ails the Clover Field.

Frequent failures of clover may not be due so much to poor soil or dry seasons as to the absence of the proper kind of bacteria. Clover bacteria do not thrive on acid soils. The application of ground limestone to such soils and the introduction of a few hundred pounds of ground from a clover field may quickly cure a clover sick plot. — Iowa Homestead.

NOT A BUGBEAR.

Spring Cleaning That May Be a Joy to the Housewife.

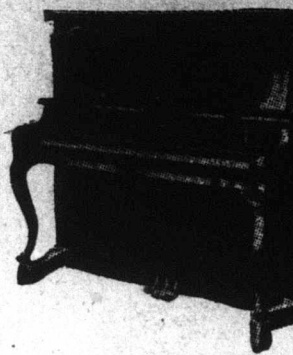

Housecleaning is not such a bugbear as it might be if a big supply of brushes, cloths, cleaning mixtures and a knowledge of the right methods of cleaning are on hand. Cleansers for enamel, marble, wood, metal, upholstery, glass, and every other substance which goes into the making and furnishing of a house should be abundantly supplied. A couple of strong new brooms, a soft, long handled duster for walls and ceilings, many clean, strong cloths for washing woodwork and floors, a whisk broom for brushing out corners and creases of padded furniture, a feather duster for occasional use, a soft floor brush, a pointed brush for corners of floors and stairs, cloths and chamols for windows and a pile of fresh cloths for cleaning of every sort—all these utensils make the work of cleaning easier. A day before housecleaning time ought to be spent in weeding out unnecessary and unwanted articles and either giving or throwing them away. There are some things, of course, which are worth keeping even when they are not wanted for immediate use. But in most houses there are too many unnecessary articles which are moved about and cleaned and put back in their places to collect dust again whenever house cleaning time comes around. Windows can be easily cleaned if a teaspoonful of turpentine is put in each bucket of water used for washing them. This gives a high polish to the glass and cleans it easily and quickly. Newspapers, tissue paper or dry chamols are all good window polishers.

Attention to Colt's Feet.

Don't forget to give the colt's feet attention. There is always a reason for a poor set of limbs. It may be hereditary, but it is generally carelessness on the part of the owner who did not keep its feet trimmed down level with the frog. A colt's feet are continually breaking off and splitting if they are not attended to promptly.—Horse Journal.

Make the Hens Work.

Don't overfeed your hens. When they begin to act lazy and walk around as if they had little or no ambition you can make up your mind that they are getting too much food without work. Bury their grain in the soft ground or in deep litter and make them work for it.—Kansas Farmer.

Compares Favorably With Timothy, Cottonseed Meal, Wheat Bran, Etc.

An Illinois experiment station test showed that with an acre yield of four tons of alfalfa hay and one and one-half tons of timothy, the timothy worth $10 per ton, an acre of alfalfa was worth $68.44 more than an acre of timothy in milk production under the conditions of the experiment and with milk at $1.30 per 100 pounds.

The New Jersey station concludes that in feeding value three pounds of alfalfa are equivalent to one of cottonseed meal. Where alfalfa was tested against wheat bran and dried brewers' grain the saving in cost of milk was 12.7 cents per 100 and 2.3 cents per pound of butter. The milk value of an acre of alfalfa was $74.

Loretta D., the great Jersey cow that beat the world's record at the St. Louis world's fair, was fed alfalfa, as were other cows that helped to make dairy history.

SPRING RECIPES.

Some Ways of Cooking the Healthful Rhubarb.

Rhubarb Fool.—Cut off the roots and leaves of a bunch of rhubarb, wipe each stick with a damp cloth and cut it into pieces about two inches long.

Put the rhubarb in a pan with the sugar and water and boil it gently. If the pan gets too dry add more water, but as little as possible.

When the rhubarb is soft rub all through a sieve. This should be done with a wooden spoon, as a metal one is liable to discolor fruit.

Measure the sieved pulp and add to it boiled custard in the given proportion.

For a good custard allow two eggs to half a pint, but for ordinary use two eggs to a pint will do quite well. See that the mixture is nicely sweetened and serve it in a glass dish.

It is a good plan to serve slices of plain cake or bread with this pudding. It makes it more substantial.

Rhubarb Shortcake.—Make a good biscuit dough and when done split and butter. The rhubarb is stewed, but not to shreds. It will need to be heavily sweetened. Spread liberally on the crust and cover with the top, also covering that, with the fruit on top. Serve with whipped cream. This makes a very healthy spring dessert. Either pie or shortcake can be made within 25 cents.

A Wedding Innovation.

At a recent wedding the bride introduced a conspicuous innovation by carrying a bouquet of deep crimson roses with her white satin and lace gown. Her wreath, too, was not the orthodox orange blossom, but consisted of white heather and myrtle leaves under the flowing tulle veil. If things go on as they are doing at present the bride's toilet will soon cease to have any distinctive note. Chiffon, nylon embroideries of pearl and crystal beads, with train of brocade in any pale color, have already been exploited in the bridal toilet, and now that the pure white bouquet has begun to be replaced by colored flowers there can be no doubt that change is going ahead in this direction.

Last week a bride carried no bouquet, but held a fan instead. The weather was not conspicuously tropical, as we may all remember, but the delicate little lace fan struck a decorative note and was less troublesome to carry than the usual bouquet.

Combs and Hairpins.

The wearing of the hair in simple, close styles has put the big, cumbersome hairpin that has been a favorite for a long time quite out of favor. The new hairpins are all small and of curved shape, so that they fit the head curves.

The combs that are again being worn are very light of weight, and all of them have narrow rolled tops. A narrow comb straight across the head near the brow is a favorite.

Amber and semi-amber combs, pins and barrettes are in the best of taste. The light ambers are being worn by the brunette as well as the blond.

the shouts of children at play, rolling, roller skating and kite sports keep the merry youngsters the go up and down the streets through the mazes of walks that cross the various public parks. Central park is the favored place of attraction for the Fifth Avenue dwellers. It is at their door and affords a room for all. The little girl with skates is Miss Dorothy Gould. She is a daughter of Frank Jay Gould. She was coming out of the house of aunt, Mrs. Shepard, formerly Miss Gould, when the photographer met her with his camera.

How, When and Where.

One of the players is sent out of the room while the others fix upon a having two or three meanings. On return the player who was sent asks each of the others the following questions: "How do you like it?" and "When do you like it?" and "Where do you like it?" For instance, we will pose vain (vane, vein) to have been word chosen. On being asked how he likes it, one of the players may answer "Not at all" (vain). The next is when he likes it and replies, "When he is down on his luck" (vein, gold). The third, who is asked where he likes it may perhaps reply, "On a steep." The questioner then asks the player how he likes it, and so on until he succeeds in discovering the word. If none of the answers enables him to guess the word he tries each of the three questions, and if he is still in the dark he must give up and go out of the room while other and less difficult word is chosen. But if he is unsuccessful in guessing the word during his rounds the player last questioned must go out of the room in his place.

A Wonderful Cataract.

The falls of Iguazu, situated where Argentina, Paraguay and Brazil meet, form one of the most wonderful cataracts in the world, being greater in extent and more varied character than the better known Niagara. The first plunge of Iguazu falls is 210 feet, followed two others of 100 feet each, while between the two series of falls there are cataracts and rapids covering vast expanse and surrounding picturesque islands.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

PRINTED LINENS.

They Are a Late Fad in House Decoration.

CHINESE DESIGNS FAVORED.

The New Futurist Colors and Pattern Are Also Being Exploited—Many Quaint Novelties in Draperies and Upholstering Fabrics.

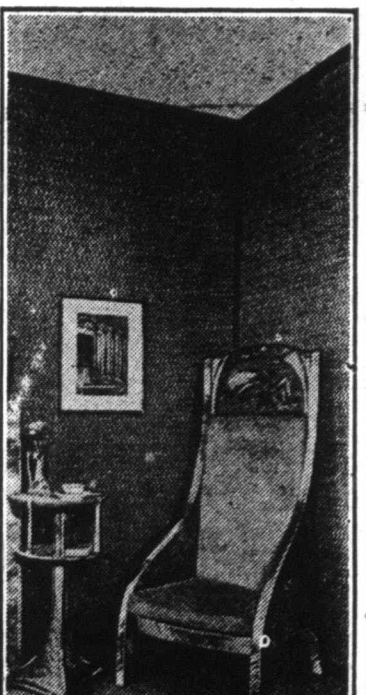

Block printed linens are the very latest fabric for use in interior decoration. They are employed for wall coverings, for hangings and for upholstery. They are absolutely new and have put the regular cretonnes and chintzes completely in the background.

The designs are drawn from Chinese sources. An especially beautiful one, showing a pattern of rather small flowers, leaves and birds in several colors on a dull rose background, was adapted from the design on a vase in the British museum.

Another has a larger and bolder design in odd shades of blue, red and white (for there are as many shades of white as of any other color) on a black or a brilliant yellow ground. Black as a foundation color in fabrics has slowly gained in vogue since it was first shown in this country three years ago.

All the Chinese colors and designs are among the leaders for this season. Chinese yellow, blue, red (the dull red of lacquer work) and mulberry are on the crest of favor at present. A dull blue, for example, covered with a network of small leaves and flowers, in which yellow, white and mulberry are mingled, is simply charming.

Birds are literally flying high in popular favor. One stunning design shows branches of a tree where assorted ornithological specimens are disporting themselves. Baskets of flowers are another feature of the new designs.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

Buying Commencement Gifts Is a Matter of Diplomacy.

FOR GIRLS ARE FASTIDIOUS.

Fond Mothers Also Recent Neglect of Their Darlings at This Important Season, and One's Errors May Become Stumbling Blocks.

Dear Elsa—In the intervals of selecting my wardrobe for the summer campaign I am trying to do the amiable thing where a score or more of young friends are concerned.

For, alas, it is the commencement season again, and the ingenious girl graduate is to the fore!

I've often wondered if the ruling that cut out commencement flowers in so many schools was not, after all, really a hardship for the graduate's friend.

In the old days one could send a cluster of blossoms or a basket of them, depending on one's intimacy with the fair one's parents. This was considered a sufficient courtesy to the family, and one really got off much better than nowadays, when the school authorities rigorously debar the floral tributes.

You see, the result has been that now one must give instead some sort of commencement gift, and, like a wedding present, it must be something showy and of intrinsic worth or it is not valued very highly.

The girls show these souvenirs to one another and to their friends, and unless they make a good showing they are apt to resent it, and their mothers, you may be sure, will resent it for them.

A little later, when these girls are debutantes and their mothers are entertaining frequently and handsomely, one may feel the weight of their displeasure in a lack of invitations to their most exclusive affairs, while the friend who has come down handsomely with a graduation gift for the debutante daughter may not only count on always being remembered with cards, but will likely be among those who are asked to assist in receiving or pouring tea.

It's no small matter at dinner to be assured that you will be paired off with some interesting eligible who has an irreproachable income, then to have to sit through the courses either with some gobbling old dodo who is already married or with an impecunious nobody who has only been invited to fill in the list. And all these things the hostess can manage.

I spent all of yesterday morning inspecting quaint trifles at the jeweler's, for I've found that the average young girl cares more for trinkets than for anything else one can give her. There are just eight girls on my list who must be given something very special and a half dozen more for whom I must buy something less expensive. Besides the time and the worry of selecting these things, my income will be substantially reduced ere all is over. But I think cheerfully of the smiles I shall receive from fond mammas who are powers in the social world and the business, and women with their more excitable nerves do in fact suffer more acutely than men. A day's shopping in the swirl of traffic and babel of noises produces extreme nervous exhaustion.

"I was a martyr to Hay Fever for probably fifteen years and I suffered terribly at times. I consulted many physicians and took their treatment—and I tried every remedy I heard of as good for Hay Fever. But nothing did me any good. Then I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and this remedy cured me completely. I am now well, and I wish to say to every sufferer from Hay Fever—"Try Fruit-a-tives". This fruit medicine cured me when every other treatment failed and I believe it is a perfect cure for this dreadful disease".

It is a mistake to suppose that work only is responsible for nervous breakdown. Modern nervous tension is due to many causes—the increase of education, the haste and speed characteristic of every affair of life, the irritability resulting from dazzling lights, bewildering noise and the whirl of amusements.

The result of natural fatigue is a lowering of sensibility, which passes away entirely after rest. But the overfatigue so common in the present time produces a state of irritable weakness which a night's repose fails to remove.

A woman suffering in this way will find that her heart beats more quickly and weakly, that her breath is "short," her temperature slightly raised and that she has lost her ordinary strength and vigor.

To add to these evils many busy women nowadays do not get enough sleep, and what sleep they have is often disturbed by city noises.

To get the most out of life it is well to go slow. The only preventive and cure of overstrain is rest, and the wo-

How, When and Where.

One of the players is sent out of the room while the others fix upon a word having two or three meanings. On his return the player who was sent away explains each of the others the following questions: "How do you like it?" "Do you like it?" and "Where do you like it?" For instance, we will suppose (vane, vein) to have been the chosen. On being asked how he likes it, one of the players may answer, "at all" (vain). The next is asked how he likes it and replies, "When he wins on his luck" (velu, gold). The player who is asked where he likes it, perhaps reply, "On a steeple." The questioner then asks the fourth question how he likes it, and so on until he succeeds in discovering the word. One of the answers enables him to guess the word he tries each player then asks three questions, and if they still in the dark he must give up and go out of the room while another and less difficult word is chosen. If he is unsuccessful in guessing the word during his rounds the player questioned must go out of the room in his place.

QUAINT UPHOLSTERED CHAIR.

They are not stiffly set on a plain background, however, but are combined artistically with other features.

These block printed linens are by no means cheap. They range from $3 to $7 a yard. But other linens in narrower widths and machine printed may be bought at a third of these prices. While the familiar chintzes are no longer at the top of the list in novelty, they are always more or less in demand and for those who do not feel that they can afford the linens will be found in new colors and patterns.

Block printed linens are also shown in the new futuristic colors and designs. These are easily recognizable by the violence of their tints and the apparent crudity of their drawing. They will undoubtedly have a certain vogue, but are not to be compared with the patterns drawn from Chinese sources.

The tans, browns and yellows are more conspicuous in this season's fabrics than they have been for some time. Mulberry is also one of the favorite tints, not only in cotton and linen fabrics, but in silks and velvets too. The bold patterns of large flowers are good in chintzes, but they are scarcely seen at all in separate bunches—rather in all over designs almost covering the groundwork.

"Casement cloth," a wool fabric which has the light weight and suppleness of cotton material, is much used in country houses for hangings. It comes in plain colors. Striped taffeta, the plain silk in one shade alternating with a brocaded stripe in another color, is used for bedroom hangings.

The arts and crafts fad is responsible for many picturesque departures in the way of furniture designing, and the movement which had its origin in Germany is closely akin to this. The handsome easy chair illustrated here is an imported one, the high back with its panel of inlaid wood being especially graceful. The panel comes just at about the height of the head, and so the upholstery will not be worn or soiled, and it sometimes is, through contact with the hair. The table for flowers or the afternoon tea is another quaint development of the designers' art.

Can Prosecute Unions.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—President Wilson yesterday signed the sundry civil appropriation bill with a statement declaring that he would have vetoed, if he could, the provision in it exempting labor unions' and farmers' organizations from prosecution under a certain $300,000 fund, designated for the operation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The President characterized the exemption as "unjustifiable in character and principle," but called attention to the fact that the Department of Justice possessed other funds with which to enforce the anti-trust law.

and weakly, that her breath is "short," her temperature slightly raised and that she has lost her ordinary strength and vigor.

To add to these evils many busy women nowadays do not get enough sleep, and what sleep they have is often disturbed by city noises.

To get the most out of life it is well to go slow. The only preventive and cure of overstrain is rest, and the woman who leads a tranquil life will really succeed in enjoying a maximum of its pleasures.

GAY EMBROIDERIES.

A Touch of Color Required by the Mode.

One must have a vivid touch in one's costume to be effective and in fashion. Illustrated here are two of the newest Bulgarian collar models. One is a shoulder point shape of ruff with machine embroideries in color. The other is a Robespierre collar of lace attached to a fichu and chemisette, narrow colored braid being used as trimming on the lace.

While a number of large collars are still being used on children's coats, the tendency is to have them a little smaller than was the case last season. The revers also are made to conform with this style. Many of the newest models have lingerie collars. These are either buttoned or basted on so that they can be readily taken off when soiled. Furthermore, the opportunity is presented of having one or more collars to the same coat.

Allover open work embroideries are made up in flounced skirts. They are used, too, for tunics, in which they are combined with lace and are worn over a foundation skirt, which is an elaborate mixture of plain material, with two or three different kinds of lace. This use of several different varieties of lace is characteristic of many of the high priced imported gowns.

It is not only the girl graduate who makes demands on one's purse at this season, but the summer tourist. Aunt Jane, from whom, you know, I have fond expectations, is going abroad, some one having told her that one of the many famous spas on the other side will be just the thing for her gout. As an affectionate and dutiful niece it behooves me to send something to her stateroom on the day of sailing, thus to testify to the high reward in which I hold her. In running through the shops on this errand I find that many of them cater to just such as I am. There are counters on which going away gifts of this sort are alluringly set out for the enticement of tribute giving friends.

Of course flowers are not taboo so far as the tourist is concerned, but Aunt Jane would think very poorly of my discretion were I to waste my substance on such perishable trifles as flowers. Aunt Jane is thrifty, be it known, and she has no patience with what she calls extravagance.

So I selected a warm, handsome pair of boudoir slippers and accompanied it by a modest basket of fruit, for, you know, Aunt Jane's weakness is good things to eat.

This steamer basket is a Chinese double decked affair, standing fifteen or eighteen inches high. The basket itself is lovely and can be used for years after the fruit is gone. It is filled with all the delicacies of the season—oranges, apples, grapefruit, red and yellow bananas—and to the handle a huge bunch of Hamburg grapes is fastened by a bow of soft ribbon which harmonizes with the color of the grapes. A silver fruit knife and spoon are part of the equipment of the basket, and in the lower compartment are paper fruit plates and napkins decorated with red roses.

For another friend who is going abroad and who is of a less serious and exacting disposition than my venerated relative I purchased a good luck box, which is a novelty attractively put up. Inside a big box are many small packages, each done up in tissue paper fastened with pretty labels and accompanied by a card bearing a verse appropriate to the gift inclosed. The gifts vary according to the purchaser's wishes, for the boxes may be made to order.
